ENVIRONMENTAL controls to halt development in Carmel Valley when specific levels of air, water, noise and traffic pollution are reached may not get full consideration in the Carmel Valley Master Plan environmental impact report, if supervisors follow a staff recommendation. The potential for environmental degradation is evident in this view of the mouth of the Valley, looking south from Carmel Valley Road. (Michael Gardner photo).

'Trigger' devices too costly, consultant says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

FURTHER EVALUATION of proposed "trigger mechanisms" in the Carmel Valley Master Plan would be too costly and they would probably prove to be impractical, says the consulting firm which produced the Master Plan environmental impact report.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will hold the second certification hearing on the EIR at 9 a.m., Monday, March 29 at the courthouse in Salinas.

Supervisors will review a detailed report from Planning Director Ed De Mars which recommends certification of the EIR — with some updated information on noise, traffic and sewage, but without any further analysis of "trigger mechanisms."

The city of Carmel, through City Atty. George Brehmer, has told the Board of Supervisors it stands ready to take Monterey County to court if those control devices are not more fully explored.

Trigger mechanisms, as proposed by the city of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, would define levels of noise, air, water and traffic pollution. When those levels are reached, building in Carmel Valley would be stopped.

Sedway/Cooke of San Francisco is the consulting firm hired by the county for $36,000 to produce the EIR in compliance with a court order which resulted from a legal challenge to the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan brought by the city of Carmel.

In a letter to the county planning department, Sedway/Cooke points out obstacles to further analysis of the trigger mechanisms:

"Such triggering mechanisms have been proposed elsewhere (Mendocino County, Tahoe Basin) although there are no such successfully functioning comprehensive trigger or threshold mechanisms extant to (our) knowledge.

"In addition to being unproven, triggering mechanisms would clearly require intensive and continuous monitoring of all critical environmental parameters on a sub-area basis, an undertaking which may render it economically and administratively unfeasible."

There are other "less burdensome" mitigation measures which are available as alternatives to the proposed trigger mechanisms, according to the consultant.

What's in a comma?

Dear Editor:

This refers to "The Great Carmel Comma Dispute" as reported in the March 18 Pine Cone/Outlook.

It appears that Mayor Laiolo does not know that Charlotte Townsend's full name is Charlotte Townsend Comma. Therefore, her campaign literature should be interpreted as reading "Elect Charlotte Townsend Comma Mayor."

As many of her friends know, her full name used to be Charlotte Townsend Period until her numerous admirers convinced her that she is a starter. Not one to beat her own drum, however, she compromised with Comma.

It's Camp Steffani

Dear Editor:

Recently in your writing you referred to "Camp Stephanie." The correct spelling is Steffani. It so happens to be named after Joseph Steffani, an American of Italian background.

The spelling of Stephanie is of Greek origin.

Examine the records

Dear Editor:

All too often, we vote for someone because we have heard the name mentioned, because someone else is voting that way, or because we don't know any better.

Three people are running for the job of mayor in Carmel. Two of the candidates have held the job before. Their records are known. The third candidate, Charlotte Townsend, has a wealth of successful experience in public office with the Carmel Sanitary District, the Harrison Memorial Library, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and the Carmel Citizens Committee. She had demonstrated a level head, and ability to deal with diverse and diverging viewpoints, and a dedication to the service of her community.

Before election day, I hope the voters in Carmel will examine the records of the three candidates. When they do, they will vote as I will — for Charlotte Townsend for mayor.

Time for dignity

Dear Editor:

It is time to instill some dignity and decorum to the procedural activities of the Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council.

Preserving the unique characteristics of our village and honoring the concepts and traditions we have tried to maintain calls for a compromise between the necessary tourist industry (the base for our low tax rate), and controlling the overdevelopment of "tacky" shops oriented to that industry — this can be furthered by electing a concerned and competent leader.

We have the opportunity to elect such a leader: Charlotte Townsend, candidate for mayor, with a record of dedicated service to the community in both elected and voluntary capacities.

Support Carmel Photoart

Dear Editor:

Your recent report on the City Council's review of Carmel PhotoArt caught my attention as I have been using their service since the opening.

As a photography major I have high standards for acceptable photo processing. Carmel PhotoArt has produced consistently excellent color prints — which have satisfied both my business and personal needs. They have offered free film with processing which has certainly been a welcome savings.

Prints are delivered in one hour as promised. The staff is both courteous and knowledgeable. The technicians obviously take pride in their work.

Carmel PhotoArt has definitely satisfied my color photo processing needs. I support their presence in the community.

Supports local race walk

Dear Editor:

I don't know which is more amusing: wiggling race walkers going along Scenic or a motorist's expression on first encountering these fleet pedestrians.

That the Athletic Congress of the U.S. is holding its 1982 25 KM race walking championship here Sunday, March 28, is a testament to the good work of former Olympic race walker Giulio de Petra of the Highlands, and the Monterey Peninsula Walk Walk Walk Club. Free to spectators the scene will be the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club at 10 a.m.

Consider Canada route

Dear Editor:

When the Cal-Trans staff recently recommended that the State drop the "Hatton Canyon Freeway" and dispose of the property some "either/or" letters appeared in the Pine Cone.

Numerous arguments can be made over the present need, cost-effectiveness or net gain in traffic flow from either widening Highway 1 or building a route through Hatton Canyon between Carpenter and the Carmel Rancho Shopping area. The latter would probably result in more traffic signals (like the new Rio Road layout?) or an underpass or overpass (like the intersection of Highway 1 and 68 near the Navy School?)

The "Hatton Canyon Freeway" was conceived over 25 years ago, as I recall. Since then major changes have taken place in commute patterns from Marina, Fort Ord, Sand City, Seaside, Del Rey Oaks and Monterey to and from Carmel Valley. New development either approved or proposed in all of these areas will certainly produce vast changes in traffic by commuters, suppliers, builders and others participating in the projected growth. This is emphasized by proposals for Monterey along Highway 68 and most of Carmel Valley.

Why must all of this traffic be funnelled through Carmel or its immediate vicinity?

About 10 years ago a route was surveyed by the Monterey County Public Works Department that would have taken traffic from lower Carmel Valley, on a new road near Valley Greens Drive to a point on Highway 68 just east of Del Rey Oaks Blvd. This was approaching the design stage when the then Board of Supervisors decided not to proceed. I believe it was described as the Canada Route.

This or some similar route would carry much of the commuter and other traffic and allow present roads to serve Carmel and its immediate environs with only minor change. Furthermore it avoids additional complicated traffic controls or a "can of worms" in an established residential area.

Those wishing to prevent a major change in Carmel environment must promote such an alternative.

I remember "Coach"

Dear Editor:

Some time ago I learned of the death of Coach George Mosoff. At that time I meant to write a letter to the Pine Cone expressing my feelings about Coach. Because of some things I have just recently learned about myself, I think I can now express my feelings more accurately.

George Mosoff was my high school and physical education teacher. When I was in high school my parents had been divorced for about three years. I lived with my mother and my younger brother in Carmel.

When I first learned of Coach's death I wanted to write to the people of Carmel and tell them why I thought Coach was one of the most inspirational people I met while I was growing up. I still feel that his manner and conduct were examples for anyone who came in contact with him to follow. I have met only one or two people since then who had as much influence on my life.

When he coached a team we were inspired by him in sound preparation and in a quiet, gentle manner. Later when I came in contact with more abrasive coaches in college, I realized how much I appreciated the way Coach conducted himself at all time with his teams. I don't believe anyone could have got-

Supervisors should consider all aspects of Master Plan EIR

By ROBERT MISKIMON

AN INCREDIBLE recommendation has gone forward to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

After months of public scrutiny of the environmental impact report on the Master Plan, the controversial "trigger" mechanisms to link development controls to environmental standards seem to have been given short shrift.

In a memorandum to the Board of Supervisors, the county planning staff has recommended the inclusion of some updated information on noise and water quality in Carmel Valley, and has said — in effect — that further evaluation of those trigger mechanisms would be too costly and impractical. (See related story in this issue).

This will undoubtedly come as a surprise to the city of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, both of which have pressed for a fuller examination of those mechanisms before the EIR is certified. The proposed trigger mechanisms would — if implemented — require a halt to construction in the Valley whenever specific air, water, noise, and traffic pollution levels are reached, or when water supplies reached critically low levels.

ten as much out of the talent Coach had to work with as he did.

I remember one time towards the end of my senior year in high school, that Coach chastized me and another teammate for our involvement in a hazing incident of an underclassman. He did not use loud or profane words but I never felt more embarrassment for a rebuke from anyone before. A few years later when Coach complimented me on my play in a recreational basketball game, I never felt greater praise.

Until recently I did not realize how much I admired and respected George Mosoff, my high school coach... and perhaps a replacement father for the father I didn't have living at home with me. I do not know whether Coach tried to be a "father" to boys like myself. All I do know is that Coach was as good an example of a man as any other male adult I came in contact with during my youth.

I am only sorry that I did not have the chance to tell Coach how much I admired and respected him or how much he meant to me before he left us. God be with you forever, Coach.

More than one market

Dear Editor:

In all this controversy regarding Bruno's Market, I'm surprised that no one has written in to express their feelings for the other markets in Carmel.

I shop at Neilsen's and Carmel Health Shop, not because Bruno's employees are striking, but because I think they are great markets. The new Neilsen's is spacious and nearly always has what I want. The employees are friendly and helpful, the produce and meats are exceptionally good. My favorite attraction is the flowers. I realize that the outdoor display has caused some controversy with the city, but I find it one of the nicer elements of the store. Even though they have expanded greatly (compared to their old store), they have kept a certain charm, that I find very in keeping with Carmel.

Carmel Health Shop (conveniently located across the street) is an excellent all-around health food store. We buy all our dairy products, vitamins, bread, etc. Mario and Jeanne San Carlo are wonderful people to do business with, always giving one personal attention and encouraging words. For a store so small, I think they have done a super job of providing a really varied stock.

I shopped at Bruno's for years, before Nielsen's moved. My mother shopped there

True, those devices may be cumbersome and complicated to administer, but they hold the promise of some real "teeth" to prevent environmental catastrophe, beyond the planning and zoning controls in the Master Plan. For that reason, they should not simply be dismissed as too costly or burdensome.

The Board of Supervisors — already threatened with another lawsuit by the city of Carmel if it doesn't pursue a more in-depth analysis of the trigger mechanisms — will have the final say on whether the recommendation of the consultant and county planning staff is followed.

While it may cost the county some additional dollars to make a meaningful evaluation of the feasibility of the proposed environmental controls, supervisors can not assert that all environmental aspects of the Master Plan have been fully addressed until those trigger mechanism are more fully explored.

Thus it would be wise for the Board of Supervisors to weigh the consequences of simply writing off those proposals — both in political and legal terms — before any decision is made to certify the Master Plan EIR as complete on March 29.

when it was Pilot's and Morton's. I am very sympathetic to the employees' problems with the new owners, and I wouldn't dream of crossing the picket line.

Consider the qualifications

Dear Editor:

On Tuesday, April 13 Carmel voters will have an opportunity to elect a mayor who will be experienced and well qualified. Her campaign slogan is "Let's get together."

Charlotte Townsend, formerly Charlotte Hurst, is a life-time resident of Carmel. She attended school at Sunset, then a local high school then on to Stanford University followed by graduate studies at the universities of Zurich, Heidelberg and the Sorbonne. Her work experiences have been in the fields of journalism, recreation and library. For the past six years she has served as president of the Carmel Sanitary District.

She says, "I am concerned about preserving the unique beauty and special qualities of our part of the world. If elected I would strive to be a focal point for a cooperative and 'middle ground' approach leading to solutions."

I hope all voters will read and consider her qualifications and judge for themselves.

Just ask for facts

Dear Editor:

I have talked to the people outside the store at Bruno's and I have talked to the people on the picket line. I believe that a person should listen to both sides of a story before making up one's own mind. Everyone is entitled to one's own opinion.

I have tried to talk with the owners of the store and all they have told me is "I wish it would be over." I have been told by Vince Bruno that if anyone has any question as to where he stands to call him at Top Hat Market in Pacific Grove.

If people want to shop at Bruno's they can. If they want to get the facts concerning the strike, they can. The striking picketers are more than willing to explain their position. If you care, just ask.

In exclusive interview:

Carmel police chief reveals goals

By FLORENCE MASON

AFTER ONE week on the job, Carmel's new police chief is convinced that it was "meant to be." When I talked with this straightforward, serious, intelligent man it was easy to see why he feels that way; Jack McGilvray and Carmel appear to be an excellent match.

Q: What led you to Carmel and this position? Were you actively seeking a change?

A: No. It really was a coincidence. I had been thinking for several years about making a change, primarily to get out of the metropolitan area. I thought that when the right job came along, I would apply. But I had only applied once before. The coincidence was that a lieutenant in the Los Angeles Police Department had a friend who vacationed here in Carmel and was a subscriber to the Pine Cone/Outlook. He read that Chief Ellis was retiring and got the word to me. I had to put my resume together in a hurry, and submitted it just under the wire.

Q: How much did you know about Carmel? Had you visited the city before?

A: My wife and I were here over 20 years ago. But most of our vacations have been family camping in Southern California. However, we were here last August with our three youngest children, as part of a trip to show them some of Northern California's special places. We just spent part of the day. It's a fact that both my wife and I had the thought then that this would be a nice place to retire to — as chief of police. But not with any sense that it would ever happen!

Q: Your move from commanding officer of a large area in the LAPD to chief of a relatively small police department might seem to be a major one; is that how you see it?

A: It is on a different scale, but it is very much like moving from one station to another. Of course, it requires some adjustment on my part, and some adjustment to me — to a new chief — on the part of the people in the department. So far, I am trying to perform as though it were a transfer of command from one station to another. The people here have been tremendous; any concerns I might have had about the move have vanished. The department, the residents, the city administration, the business community — all have been wonderful.

Q: In your experience with the LAPD, what did you find most satisfying?

A: The past six years in command of two separate areas. One for three and one-half years, the other — most recently — for two and one-half. It was very much like being chief of a small-city department. I particularly enjoyed the administrative experience, with its feeling of being in charge. I think that experience will help me here.

Q: What did you like least in your years with the LAPD?

A: The tragic things, especially when families — children — were involved. You never get used to them. Similarly, the officer deaths. You have to get hardened to some aspects of police work, but you never do get used to those.

Q: As you get under way, have you or will you seek information and assistance from (former) Chief Ellis and others?

A: Yes, indeed. I met with Chief Ellis last Tuesday, went to Rotary with him Wednesday and will be meeting with him again. He has been extremely helpful. As for others: I can't say enough for (Captain) Bob Fischer. He has been totally supportive and very helpful ever since the decision to hire me was announced — even to helping me find a temporary apartment here in the city. I can understand his disappointment, since he was also a candidate for the position. I have had disappointments of my own. But he has handled it splendidly.

Q: I noticed that you are in "civilian" clothes. Will you be wearing a uniform?

A: I haven't decided about that, haven't ordered any yet. Officers in command positions didn't wear them in the LAPD, except for special occasions. People will probably see me more in business suits; there's more flexibility that way.

Q: Are you aware, yet, of any special problems you will be dealing with in Carmel?

A: I haven't been here long enough to have much of a start on that. I am aware that there has been an increase in burglaries. I'm very interested in crime prevention programs and will be working in that direction.

Q: What about traffic problems?

A: I've already experienced them! When I went to a meeting last week, I had to park two and one-half blocks away. I do have some experience with this problem and know of some things that have been done in other areas, but I don't know what will work here. I prefer to walk, so when the weather is nice, people will see me walking as much as I can.

Q: Many people would like to see more done for young people in Carmel — have you had experience in that area?

A: Yes, I have worked with young people a lot. One way was through a law enforcement Explorer program, which helped to channel some of their energy into work that was a great help to us as well as satisfying for them. I have heard "there aren't enough facilities" in a lot of communities. Here, I'll have to find out first what programs there are and how we might be able to strengthen them. Certain programs attract certain young people. There isn't any one that will appeal to all of them. We need a variety, and to make certain that the young people are aware of what is available.

Q: Have you developed a particular style of management?

POLICE CHIEF Jack McGilvray (left) confers with Capt. Bob Fischer, who served as acting police chief during the selection process for a successor to retired Chief Bill Ellis.

McGilvray, a veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, started in his new assignment March 15. (Michael Gardner photo).

A: I think you would say it is somewhat of a democratic style — a team approach. We have to resolve our problems together. I need input from the rest of the management team and then also from the other members of the department. I had a meeting today with the entire department and I will have monthly supervisors' meetings. The important thing is communication — in both directions. Of course, if I see trouble developing or believe there is a hazard of some sort, I would act more arbitrarily.

Q: There aren't — haven't ever been — women as sworn officers in the Carmel Police Department. Will that change under your leadership?

A: Anyone hired for this department will always be the best possible candidate. That could be a woman. I have just left a department where we had a large number of female uniformed officers in the field; some were outstanding. Some had a difficult time adjusting; but so did some of the men. I can't say there will be women in the field here, or when; the rule of "best qualified" will always apply.

Q: What qualities will you be looking for when you are hiring new officers?

A: Stability, integrity, maturity. And when they are coming from another police department, I'll want to know as much as I can about their performance there.

Q: Do you find it difficult, today, to recruit officers with those qualities?

A: No, not when they are young and inexperienced. They are eager and give a great deal to the job. But it is a fact that their attitudes may change along the way. I don't know why. Because of the negative criticism they live with? Working conditions? Burnout? Family problems? We have to be aware of the danger signs and do something about them.

Larger departments such as the LAPD have psychologists assigned to each station on a part-time basis. At first, not many officers asked for help, but that has changed and the psychologists have been of tremendous value. They may work with the families too. Here, I don't know what the city's position is on that. I would like to have supervisors who are trained to watch for the danger signals, and resources to which we could refer officers when we see problems developing.

Q: What is your early background? Why did you go into police work?

A: After high school, I worked for about a year in a machine shop and decided that was not for me. I had thought about being a fireman. Then I got involved with friends who were in the police science program at LA City College and applied there. I have never regretted it and I have no complaints at all about my years with the Los Angeles department. My education was in community colleges and at Pepperdine. My bachelor's degree at Pepperdine was in public management, and I have a master's in public administration from the same college. I felt that these programs were outstanding.

Q: I know that you have had a good deal of community and public relations experience. Will that be useful here?

A: Very much so; I feel right at home in those areas. Each station in the LAPD used to have a community relations officer (until recent budget cuts limited the program) and that was my role in the Hollywood station when I was a lieutenant. As an area commander, more recently, I had full responsibility for community relations. I especially enjoyed my contacts with the business districts in that jurisdiction: seven Chambers of Commerce, Rotary clubs (I regularly attended four), plus Kiwanis, Optimist and Exchange service organizations.

We had an especially interesting group in the West Valley — Police Activity League Supporters. They were business people who supported community relations and youth activities. When I came to that area there were only three board members left in the group. Now there are 140 and it is a lively organization. Their concerns included activities for young people in a Latin-American community.

So I'm very comfortable with community groups. I want to be actively involved with the Carmel Business Association and local service clubs. My only problem may be conflicts in the meeting times of the various groups; I have already run into that!

Q: What about your relationship with local newspapers?

A: It seemed to be another interesting coincidence that your local paper — the Pine Cone/Outlook — is a weekly that comes out on Thursday. The community paper in West Valley had the same schedule. One of the biggest problems for police departments everywhere is that the positive things about police service are the ones that don't get publicized (officers involved in youth programs, for instance). That's very important to us.

Q: About your family — will they be moving to Carmel when school closes?

A: Yes, my wife, Miriam, and our three youngest children will be here. We have two older boys also: Brian, 23, is a Ventura County Deputy Sheriff. Michael, 26, is married and lives in Apple Valley with his wife and our grandson, Kyle. The younger ones are Brenda, 13, Patrick, 15 and Denis, 17. Denis graduates from high school this June and may go to Monterey Peninsula College. We hope to have Patrick at Palma High in Salinas (a parochial school) and Brenda at the Carmel Mission School. My wife and at least two of the younger children are coming to Carmel for Easter. We'll be looking for a home to rent, as close to Carmel as possible. We would like to find a house with four bedrooms and I already know how hard it's going to be.

Q: How is your family adjusting to this major change in their lives?

A: It has been hardest for Brenda, who would have gone into the eighth grade next fall at her school. That's a very special time for them and she will miss her friends. But she is adjusting well, as are the boys, very well.

It's my wife who can't wait to get here! She is ecstatic about it. We've been married more than 27 years and she has always been very active, very much involved in church and school activities with me and all the children. A couple of years ago she went back to school for secretarial courses and she has been working part-time in an insurance office for about a year and a half. I don't think she will work outside the home here — at least not for a while.

Q: I see a golf trophy there on your shelf; are you an avid player?

A: I play "at it" — I'm a hacker. But it is another of the reasons why I am delighted to be here; I'm certainly in the right place for that. The rest of our activities revolve around the children and their interests. Oh yes, I've been in the Naval Reserve 12 years and the Coast Guard reserve for 21; even though I am currently on inactive status, I'll be checking in with the Monterey station.

Q: How do you stay so fit?

A: Well, I like to walk. I'm not one for using golf carts. And I watch my diet. My wife is very good at watching the family's nutrition. And I've always had a slender build. But at 49 I know I have to be careful!

Planners refer mini-mart issue to committee

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHEN PLANNING commission Chairman Robert Stephenson said Feb. 17 that it would take months for the city to prepare an ordinance regulating mini-marts, he made an accurate prediction.

One month to the day — March 17 — the commission reached a consensus that the issue of regulation of the subdivision of large buildings into smaller retail shops should be reviewed by its land use committee.

If the committee, planning commission and city council follow a normal schedule for adoption of a mini-mart ordinance, it would probably not go into effect until August, said Planning Director Robert Griggs.

"If things flow normally, it would probably not be until August before an ordinance could go into effect," said Griggs. "It could be speeded up, but I don't think it will be."

It appears the land use committee will prepare a draft ordinance in early April and send it to the planning commission for an April 28 study session.

A public hearing on the ordinance, which is required by law, would be scheduled for May 19.

If the proposed ordinance is recommended by the commission for council adoption it would then go to the city council for a public hearing in mid-June, Griggs indicated.

The council would probably act on the ordinance in July and it would become law in August, about six months after it was first proposed, Griggs said.

The city council has extended its moratorium on construction of mini-marts until an ordinance is approved.

City officials have indicated that an ordinance is necessary to prohibit subdivision of retail space into less than 250 sq. ft. in the city. The moratorium was enacted in response to the subdivision of the Paradise building, northeast corner of Ocean and Dolores. (See related story, this issue).

AT THE March 17 planning commission session, a second draft of a report which details definitions and limits for mini-marts was released by Commissioner John Logan.

Logan proposed the following:

- "Only the ground floor of an existing development may be divided for retail sales enterprises. Neither basement nor any upper floor may be used for a retail sales enterprise, although any may be used for purposes for which the public is not admitted, such as storage (and) administrative offices. However, upper floors may be used for professional offices or apartments as now provided.

- "Each divided commercial development shall contain a water closet and lavatory for each sex, whenever the total number of managers and employees of either sex working within the property at any time exceeds a total of five persons. It is not necessary that such facilities be made available to the public.

- "The maximum number of commercial enterprises on the ground floor of a divided commercial development shall be determined in the following manner: 30 percent of the floor space shall be reserved for interior public open space, an additional reserve shall be made for required toilet facilities, stairwells to upper and lower floors, and for spaces not open to the general public.

- "The remaining space may be divided into separate enterprises, the average floor area being 600 or more sq. ft., the minimum being 150 sq. ft. Under use permit, the Board of Adjustments may authorize averages as low as 560 sq. ft. upon findings of triviality or of support to the residential character of the Village."

- "The minimum area may be reduced for not more than one separate enterprise through a use permit issued by the Board of Adjustments with a mandatory finding that the enterprise supports the residential character of Carmel. Granting of such a use permit shall not reduce the required average area.

- "Divided spaces shall be completely enclosed by walls that extend from floor to ceiling. Each divided space will have its own entry into the interior public open space."

- "The interior public open space will be subject to design review just as if that space were on the exterior of the building adjacent to the public way.

- "Should an existing commercial development be divided so that one or more separate enterprises have individual access to the public way and other enterprises within the development have access only to the interior public open space, the average and minimum floor space requirement and the requirement for the interior public open space shall extend to the entire development."

LOGAN, who was aided by Stephenson and Griggs in preparation of the draft report, added that the city should also seek avenues to amortize existing divisions in basements or on upper floors.

Steve Jacobs, managing partner of Carmel Plaza, suggested changes in the draft. "There's always a danger when an ordinance tries to do too much and perhaps misses its specific intentions."

Stephenson pointed out that the Logan document was just a draft report and not a proposed ordinance.

Jacobs said there were many shops which do not need 150 sq. ft. and suggested the minimum lot size be decreased. He added that, under the amortization program, the upper floors of the Carmel Plaza would have to be closed within five years.

"I don't want to exhibit excessive paranoia," he said. "I'm sure it wasn't intended, I hope."

THE FATE of mini-marts in Carmel will probably not be decided for several more months. Above is the MacFarland Court, west side of San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth. (Michael Gardner photo)

Repairs to Carmel streets, drains will be expensive, engineer says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

SOME SAY the streets of Carmel are paved with gold.

But to the Carmel Public Works Department, they're paved with steadily deteriorating asphalt.

And the Carmel City Council will have to spend a large chunk of municipal gold in the 1982-83 budget to repair and maintain the long-neglected streets and drainage system.

City Engineer Clayton Neill advised the council last week that the time has come for some major expenditures to bring the municipal infrastructure up to snuff.

"In recent years, the capital expenditures for the street and drainage system has been only minimal," Neill informed the council by letter. "Since streets and underground drains are of a somewhat mundane nature and naturally less visible, the gradual wear and tear is not particularly evident."

"But the long-range need still exists and the cumulative impact will eventually be significant. Parts of the drainage system badly need attention and the streets need systematic protection of the wearing surface."

"There are many more people in this area at night forced to step around and through water in the streets during the period from December to April. Our own residents and tourists alike will be walking in conditions less than safe."

In April of 1981, the city engineer estimated that $555,220 would be required for minimal street improvements, but the city council budgeted only $125,000 — less than one-fourth of the estimated amount needed — for the 1981-82 budget.

Those funds have not been spent, but the council has directed city staff to come up with a laundry list of immediate street and drainage needs which can be addressed in this year's budget.

But indications are that the city may have to budget considerably more in 1982-83 than it did last year to remedy the situation.

"It's kind of like the roof on your house," Public Works Director Bill Askew told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "You need to take care of maintenance before it gets to the point where it's collapsing. We've maintained streets and drains, but in some cases we need to do more than that. Particularly in those areas where traffic is getting heavier all the time."

City Administrator Doug Peterson said specific streets and drainage projects — with cost estimates — will be developed and presented to the council for implementation this spring. Beyond that, needed projects will be considered as part of the 1982-83 budgetary process, Peterson said.

"We're not at a crisis but we need to be taking some specific steps to do some specific things," Peterson said. "At some point, you have to take some action or you have some big problems."

"OUR DRAINAGE is in pretty good shape, but in the northern part of town we need to improve drainage because of increased development, which will increase runoff," Peterson said.

"We've maintained the streets by patching and paving pretty well. We don't cut the roots of trees, as they do in some other cities, when they push up the pavement."

Peterson said he hopes to determine which street improvements would be "politically acceptable" to the city council before specific recommendations are made for the 1982-83 budget.

A crucial factor in determination of the level of expenditures for street and drainage projects is the use of Transportation Development Act funds set aside for Carmel. The city has $344,000 of those monies on deposit with Monterey County.

However, to spend those funds for public works projects, the city council would have to make a finding there are no unmet transportation needs in Carmel — a finding which councils have been unwilling to make in the past, Peterson said.

The council has designated $10,000 of those Transportation Development Act funds for a study of transportation needs in Carmel — including a look at a proposed mini-bus system.

City Engineer Clayton Neill recommended that capital improvement funds be budgeted in 1982-83 for three crucial needs:

- Enlargement of undersized drainage pipes and installation of drainage facilities east of Junipero Avenue.
- Extension of the storm drain system north from Ocean Avenue or east along Fourth or Fifth Avenues.
- Street resurfacing with asphalt/concrete and correction of pedestrian safety hazards.

Most of the drainage system was improved in the 1950s and 1960s except for two areas, Neill said. One is the area north of Fifth Avenue and south of Eighth Avenue, where there are "many sections uncompleted or inadequately sized."

"Undersized facilities and unlined channels become sources of major erosion and property damage during high intensity storms, which Carmel last experienced in 1969. This area includes homes over drain pipes, filled-in channels, unreinforced pipes, and many forms of channel impediments."

"THE RECENT property damage at Soquel Capitola is a prime example of building into drainage channels and failing to protect drainage facilities and streams. Preventive work is much less expensive than large-scale crisis repair, with the added property damage."

The other drainage problem is in the area bounded by Junipero, Sixth, Monte Verde, and Fourth where "the need is great for underground storm lines from a pedestrian safety aspect," Neill indicated in his report to the council.

"There are many more people in this area at night forced to step around and through water in the streets during the period from December to April. Our own residents and tourists alike will be walking in conditions less than reasonably safe."

A split asphalt surface on the street — "the alligator appearance" — is symptomatic of the disintegration of the pavement, Neill said.

"Many of Carmel's streets do not need an (asphalt/concrete) overlay because of favorable soil conditions or the construction completed during the 1930s and the 1950-65 period," Neill indicated. "Some streets can continue to be seal coated from maintenance funds."

"However, certain streets have increased traffic loads and the gradual deterioration is taking its toll — although this toll is less evident because of good maintenance practices. It is therefore important to upgrade a certain percentage of streets each year, as we observe being done in most other cities."

Neill said there are several "very dangerous pedestrian safety situations" that were part of street or utility undergrounding projects started but never completed. In these instances, "interim grade conditions result in either dangerously steep or ponding situations right at intersection walking routes."

INTERSECTION at Dolores and Fifth presents considerable pedestrian safety problems, according to City Engineer Clayton Neill. These include ponding (visible after recent rain storms) because of improper grades. (Robert Miskimon photos).

Laub wants city-business committee

By ROBERT MISKIMON

PAUL LAUB, the Carmel businessman who has the dubious distinction of having an ordinance unofficially named for him, thinks the city should appoint a committee to work with the business community instead of legislating against it.

Laub made his observations last week in letters to both the city council and planning commission, as each body deliberated the small space ordinance — sometimes referred to as the "Laub ordinance."

The council voted March 16 to extend the ordinance for another year, until April 5, 1982. The measure prohibits the subdivision of retail space into units of less than 250 sq.

ft. or the use of any space for retail purposes which is not enclosed by walls, ceiling and doors which can be locked.

The one-year extension will enable the planning commission to develop a permanent ordinance for recommendation to the city council. The planning commission referred the matter to its land use committee March 17, after the council extended the moratorium.

The "Laub ordinance" was passed as an urgency measure April 6, 1981 by the city council, an action prompted by the subdivision of Laub's Paradise Mall on Ocean Avenue into smaller retail outlets.

Laub has brought a lawsuit against the city in which he asserts the ordinance does not pertain to Paradise Mall. Disposition of that case is pending in Monterey County Superior Court.

In his letter to the planning commission,

Laub argues that the small space ordinance will promote — rather than restrict — the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses in Carmel.

"The purpose of the small space ordinance is theoretically to control the quality of the shops in Carmel," Laub wrote. "The concept is that control through construction will affect the goods sold in these stores."

"This is true especially in regard to the interior public open space minimum of 30 percent. This 30 percent leaves, after additional reserve for toilets, stairwells, etc., approximately 55 to 60 percent of available space for sales use."

"This reduction by almost one-half of the floor space will have the net effect of doubling the square foot rental cost. This high cost will almost guarantee that the affected stores could only be rented by tourist-oriented businesses, since only they could pay this artificially high rent established by the city."

IN HIS LETTER to the city council, Laub said his subdivision of Paradise Mall — which triggered passage of the moratorium — resulted from his inability to find "qualified tenants" for the building at Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street.

And that, in turn, was caused by another city ordinance, Laub stated.

"The tenants who wished to lease the building, namely Dansk II now located on Ocean Avenue and San Carlos, were prohibited from leasing the building because of an ordinance prohibiting their expansion," Laub's letter said.

"That ordinance was instituted by the city parents due to their fear that operations such as Dansk II would have a deleterious effect on the city. But the truth is Dansk II is a handsome store with quality merchandise that benefits Carmel. Essentially, the negative aspect of the Dansk ordinance brought about the Paradise division."

Laub called upon both the city council and the planning commission to establish a committee to work with the business sector, as an alternative to passage of more legislation to restrict business activity in Carmel.

"What is needed is a well-thought-out, positive plan for working with and developing the business community so that it will be a pride to the community as a whole," Laub stated.

"The city (should) establish a committee to look into ways of positively developing the business community in a mutually beneficial manner."

BUSINESSMAN Paul Laub believes the city should appoint a committee to work in harmony with the business community, instead of passing more ordinances and moratoriums to restrict commerce.

Consultant recommends against 'trigger' devices

this untried and possibly unfeasible mitigation method, however attractive it may be in theory," the consultant informed the county. "Any analysis of a proposed trigger mechanism would require the establishment of a hypothetical model and the performance of a feasibility study of that model, a task which would entail a level of effort which is clearly beyond the scope of our current contract with Monterey County."

THE CONSULTANT noted that the Tahoe Basin has undertaken a $500,000 "threshold" study of trigger mechanisms, three years after they were proposed.

Carmel City Atty. George Brehmer said mere acceptance of the environmental impact report without additional study of the proposed trigger mechanisms would be tantamount to no evaluation of those devices at all.

"There has been no effort made to gather data to determine how feasible those mechanisms are," Brehmer commented. "They say it's just too costly to evaluate the trigger mechanisms, that's a way of not addressing them at all."

Brehmer said the Carmel City Council may convene a special meeting to review the latest staff recommendation on the EIR and to discuss further the possibility of legal action against the county if the devices are not more fully explored.

Planning Director Ed De Mars has informed the Board of Supervisors that the EIR can be certified as having adequately responded to all concerns raised by the public when the following additional information is appended:

- Carmel Valley road noise contour maps, based on 1979 State Department of Transportation data taken along Carmel Valley Road, and projected noise contours to the year 2,000, plus a 1981 noise analysis by consultant Earth Metrics of Burlingame.

- Septic tank and sewage leachfield information as it pertains to planning in Carmel Valley, based on the recently-completed Carmel Valley wastewater study performed by Montgomery Engineers of Walnut Creek.

- Information on annual average daily traffic counts for Carmel Valley roads extracted from 1981 data developed by the Monterey County Public Works Department.

- A letter from the Carmel Valley Energy Task Force which discusses planning for energy conservation in Carmel Valley.

- The response from Sedway-Cooke on feasibility of further evaluation of the trigger mechanisms.

In answer to a question raised during the Feb. 2 certification hearing on the EIR, Sedway/Cooke replied that the latest available data on air quality, noise, and traffic had been used in preparation of the EIR.

"The county staff and all other concerned agencies were specifically requested to supply the latest available data," the consultant informed the county. "The county staff reviewed the (EIR) administrative draft for factual accuracy and currency, and corrections indicated by the county staff were incorporated into the draft EIR."

Sedway/Cooke responded that its EIR provides — within the constraints set forth by its contract and by the county staff — a "sound basis for public decision-making."

The EIR concerns a component of the general plan and does not specify where future construction is to occur, according to the consultant.

"This factor limits the degree of specificity required in the analysis and the degree of accuracy with which the severity of impacts can be predicted. Hence, it would be irresponsibly conjectural to attempt to calibrate exactly the degree to which recommended mitigations would alleviate the impacts to which they are linked."

TWO CARMEL High School students have been selected as finalists in the National Merit Scholarship Program, which offers 1,500 scholarships of $1,000 and another

3,500 four-year merit scholarships. Winners will be announced next month. CHS Principal Marsha Kading (center) congratulates Jim Costain (left) and John Parsons (right).

In 28th Assembly district

Artist Cost will challenge Sam Farr

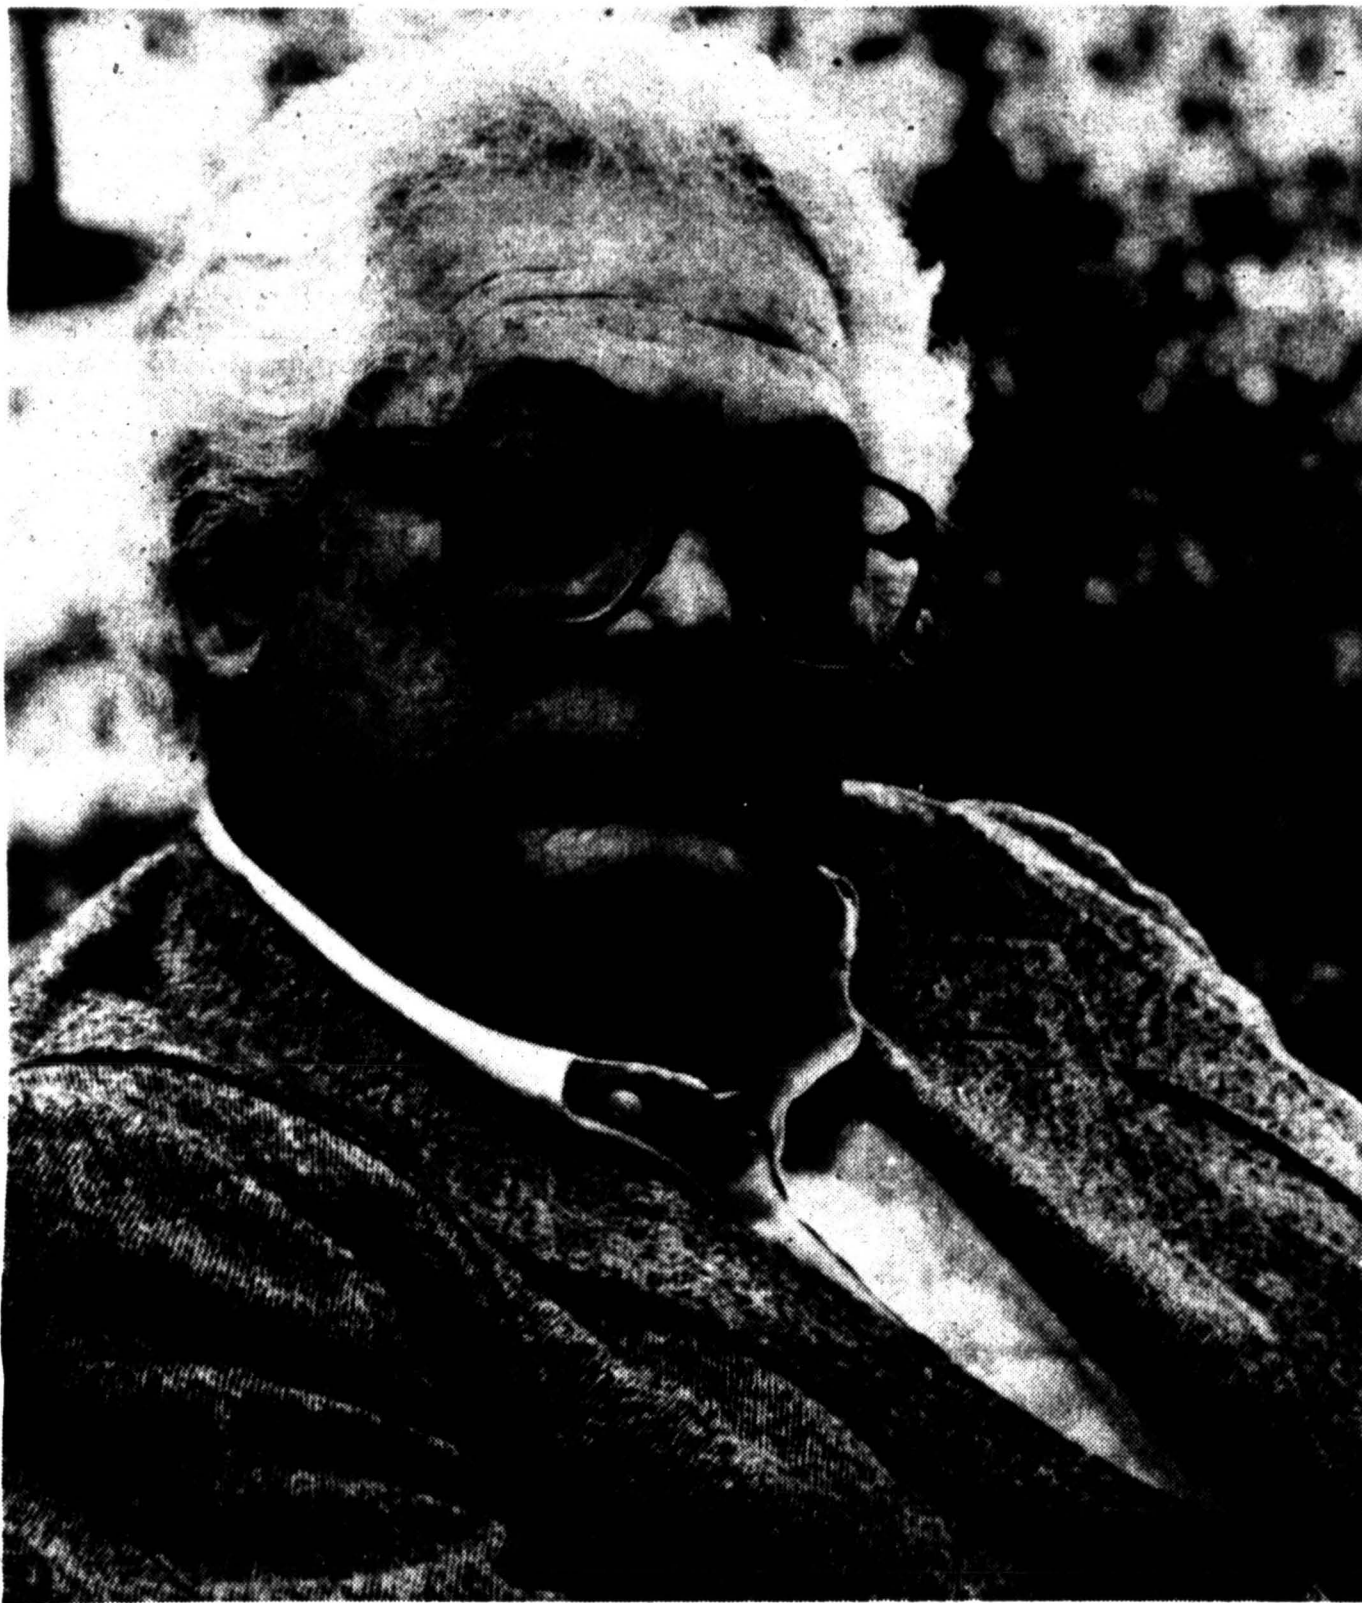

By ROBERT MISKIMON

JAMES PETER COST, a Republican who sells his art work in a Carmel gallery, will challenge incumbent Democrat Sam Farr of Carmel in the 28th Assembly District election "mostly because the people need a choice."

"I'm running as a citizen legislator, as opposed to a paid, professional politician," said the 59-year-old Cost. "Sam Farr is vulnerable because there is a groundswell of opposition to big government."

Democrat Farr and Republican Cost will appear on the June 8 primary election ballots, and since each will run unopposed for their party nomination, the two will then face each other in the November general election.

JAMES PETER COST describes himself as "a five" on a scale of one to 10, from liberal

Cost, who has been a popular Carmel representational artist since he moved here in 1964, places himself squarely in the Reagan political camp, and believes Reaganomics will work to the benefit of everyone, if given enough time.

"We've tried all those Keynesian economic methods over and over again, and we've tried to make the same theories work since 1965," Cost told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "I'm convinced those Reagan economic policies are going to work eventually. But it's not easy, especially on those who are unemployed."

"That's not Reagan's deficit. That's the product of 15 years of spending."

Cost said he believes Sam Farr and other Democrats may take a beating at the hands of a California electorate that "wants to be let alone by the government."

Although he has neither sought nor held elected public office, other than a seat on the Monterey County Republican Central Committee, Cost feels the voters will respond favorably to someone who runs as something other than a professional politician.

Sam Farr was elected to the 28th Assembly District in 1980. The district, which includes Santa Cruz and Monterey counties, is heavily Democratic, with 56,111 registered Democrats in Santa Cruz County and 25,710 Democrats in Monterey County.

By comparison, there are 34,000 registered Republicans in Santa Cruz County and 18,055 registered republicans in Monterey County.

Cost is convinced, however, there will be a substantial cross-over vote in the November election which will guarantee his success.

"There is a groundswell of conservatism in this country that really hasn't reached its peak yet," Cost said. "I'm not talking about the extreme right, but the middle of the road people. There are many people who are registered Democrats who I include in this."

RUNNING for office shouldn't prove an intolerable burden, Cost said, "because I only work three hours a day so I can do this on a full-time basis."

Cost now lives in Pebble Beach, although he lived at Carmel Point for 18 years and he still operates his gallery in Carmel.

The decision to throw his hat into the ring came about through discussions with fellow members of the Republican Central Committee about a possible challenger to Farr.

"The more I thought about it, the more I realized I would be the ideal candidate," Cost said. "I've been active in politics all my life but always behind the scenes — both in terms of support through money and by donation of my paintings. I like to support community things, but I'm not really a joiner."

Sam Farr's record on business issues is not acceptable, Cost asserted.

"On 11 issues identified by the Chamber of Commerce, he only voted in favor of business three times out of 11," the Republican stated.

Cost said he is sensitive to environmental issues because "I've spent the last 18 years of my life painting the environment and I know a lot of sea gulls personally. I'm for protecting the environment as much as possible."

At the same time, Cost said he is not alarmed about the environmental aspects of nuclear energy and the attendant problems of waste disposal. Present laws and regulations provide adequate safeguards against potential dangers of nuclear energy, Cost said.

"Someday, we'll have to have it (nuclear energy)," Cost said. "Someday the amount of energy used will be less because of new technology, so there will be less waste disposal."

"The entire nuclear energy program is working beautifully. The nuclear plant at Diablo Canyon hasn't gone on line and may never go on line because of the restraints. Someday there will be another accident like the one at Three Mile Island, but look at the amount of energy that's already been produced."

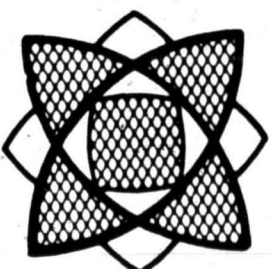

Here is Cost's view of abortion: "I'm pro-life. My personal feeling is that I'm against abortion or any kind under any circumstances."

- On gun control: "People have a right to protect themselves. If they feel a gun is what they need, then they should be allowed to have it. There's no law that says anyone has to have a gun. They can turn them in, if they want."

- On the Coastal Commission: "The Coastal Commission is getting better but there have been some abuses, for example the Odello thing. There was a need for the Coastal Commission; I voted for it."

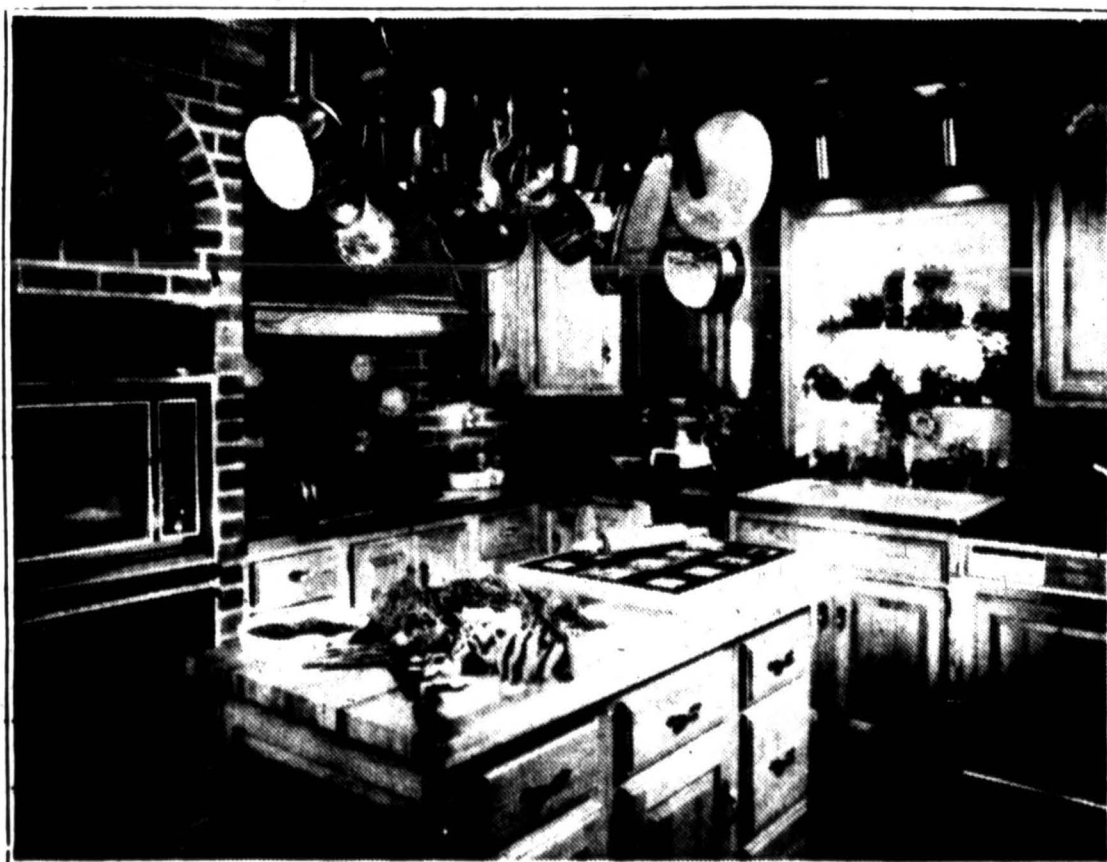

- On tax limitation: "Prop. 13 was probably badly worded and badly presented. But the message was to get government off our backs and to let us live in security. That hasn't happened. They didn't cut out the fat; they cut services. It doesn't appear there was a real effort to reduce spending; they just looked for ways to get around it."

- On the Moral Majority: "I'm not part of the Moral Majority. They have a right to exist just like anyone else has a right to exist. I would be opposed to any person trying to limit another person's freedom. If someone wants to be a member of the Moral Majority or the Young Socialists, they should be allowed, as long as it's legal."

Hopes alive for library compromise

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THERE MAY still be some hope left for a compromise in the city-county library budget tug-of-war.

The forces were mustered and ready for a lengthy debate on the issue March 23 when the board of supervisors pulled the plug and postponed the public hearing until April 13.

At stake once a conclusion is finally reached in the six-month long controversy is how much money the board of supervisors should reimburse city libraries for services they provide non-city resident patrons.

Attempts to defuse the controversial issue with compromise were labeled failures by both sides as recently as the day before the March 23 supervisors session.

But supervisors indicated they wanted more information, which may lead to another proposed alternative.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley said he wants more information on library tax monies generated by Monterey Peninsula residents.

"I'm looking for some alternative. I don't like the Sabsay formula (which proposes the cuts)," Peters said. "It's clear the county cannot continue to pay a portion of the city budget. We have to put a cap on that."

The compromise that is now in the works would propose that a "peninsula cooperative" or "joint powers agreement" be formed, said Harrison Memorial Library Director Peg Richter.

Under the proposal, the city libraries would absorb county libraries that are in urban areas and the county would keep control of the rural area libraries.

Such a consolidation would theoretically save staff time and costs of materials and supplies.

But questions remain about who would have absolute authority over the urban county libraries, whether in fact the plan would save enough money to warrant the move, and whether the county would reimburse city libraries enough to make it feasible to take over the urban facilities.

"Is the county raising enough dollars to make cooperative (efforts) feasible?" Ms. Richter asked.

She said the Carmel library board of directors may go along with a consolidation compromise if the county proves it is economically feasible and would guarantee adequate funding.

IF THE COUNTY does cut reimbursements as recommended by consultant David Sabsay, Carmel would lose approximately $130,000. The county reimbursed Carmel $160,000 in fiscal year 1981-82.

Sabsay claims the county has spent too much money on city libraries, and says rural libraries suffer because an unfair amount goes to the cities.

City officials claim that their libraries need the reimbursements to offset the cost of providing services to non-city resident patrons.

If the county cuts reimbursements, cities have considered charging a fee or even closing the doors to non-city resident patrons.

Meanwhile, massive write-in campaigns by both sides have swamped supervisors' mailboxes.

Two days before supervisors were originally scheduled to hold a public hearing on the issue, Peters' office reported it had received between 650-700 cards and letters.

With the postponement of the hearing to April 13, Peters' aide Stephen Slade said he expects even more mail.

"It's a tremendous response. By far it has generated the most public interest," Slade said.

The volume of mail on the library is the most received by Peters' office on any single issue, Slade said.

Of the mail counted by March 19, the cards and letters were running three-to-two against the consultant's recommendation that reimbursements be cut to city libraries that provide services to non-city resident patrons, Slade said.

The mail is mostly from the Carmel area, although some letters have been received from Big Sur and other areas of the county, he added.

A sampling of the mail indicates public sentiment.

From Carmel Valley: "To me, it is totally unacceptable and indeed ludicrous that 25 percent of the county library budget is apportioned to city libraries and then all discretion over how it is spent is taken from county control. As a county resident, I resent this method of apportioning these funds. It is not sound management."

From Big Sur: "The only public library along our 70 miles of coast is the Big Sur branch. (It) is used by coastal residents, and by teachers and students of the Captain Cooper and Pacific Valley Schools. (The new formula) would release funds with which improved services could be provided to rural areas."

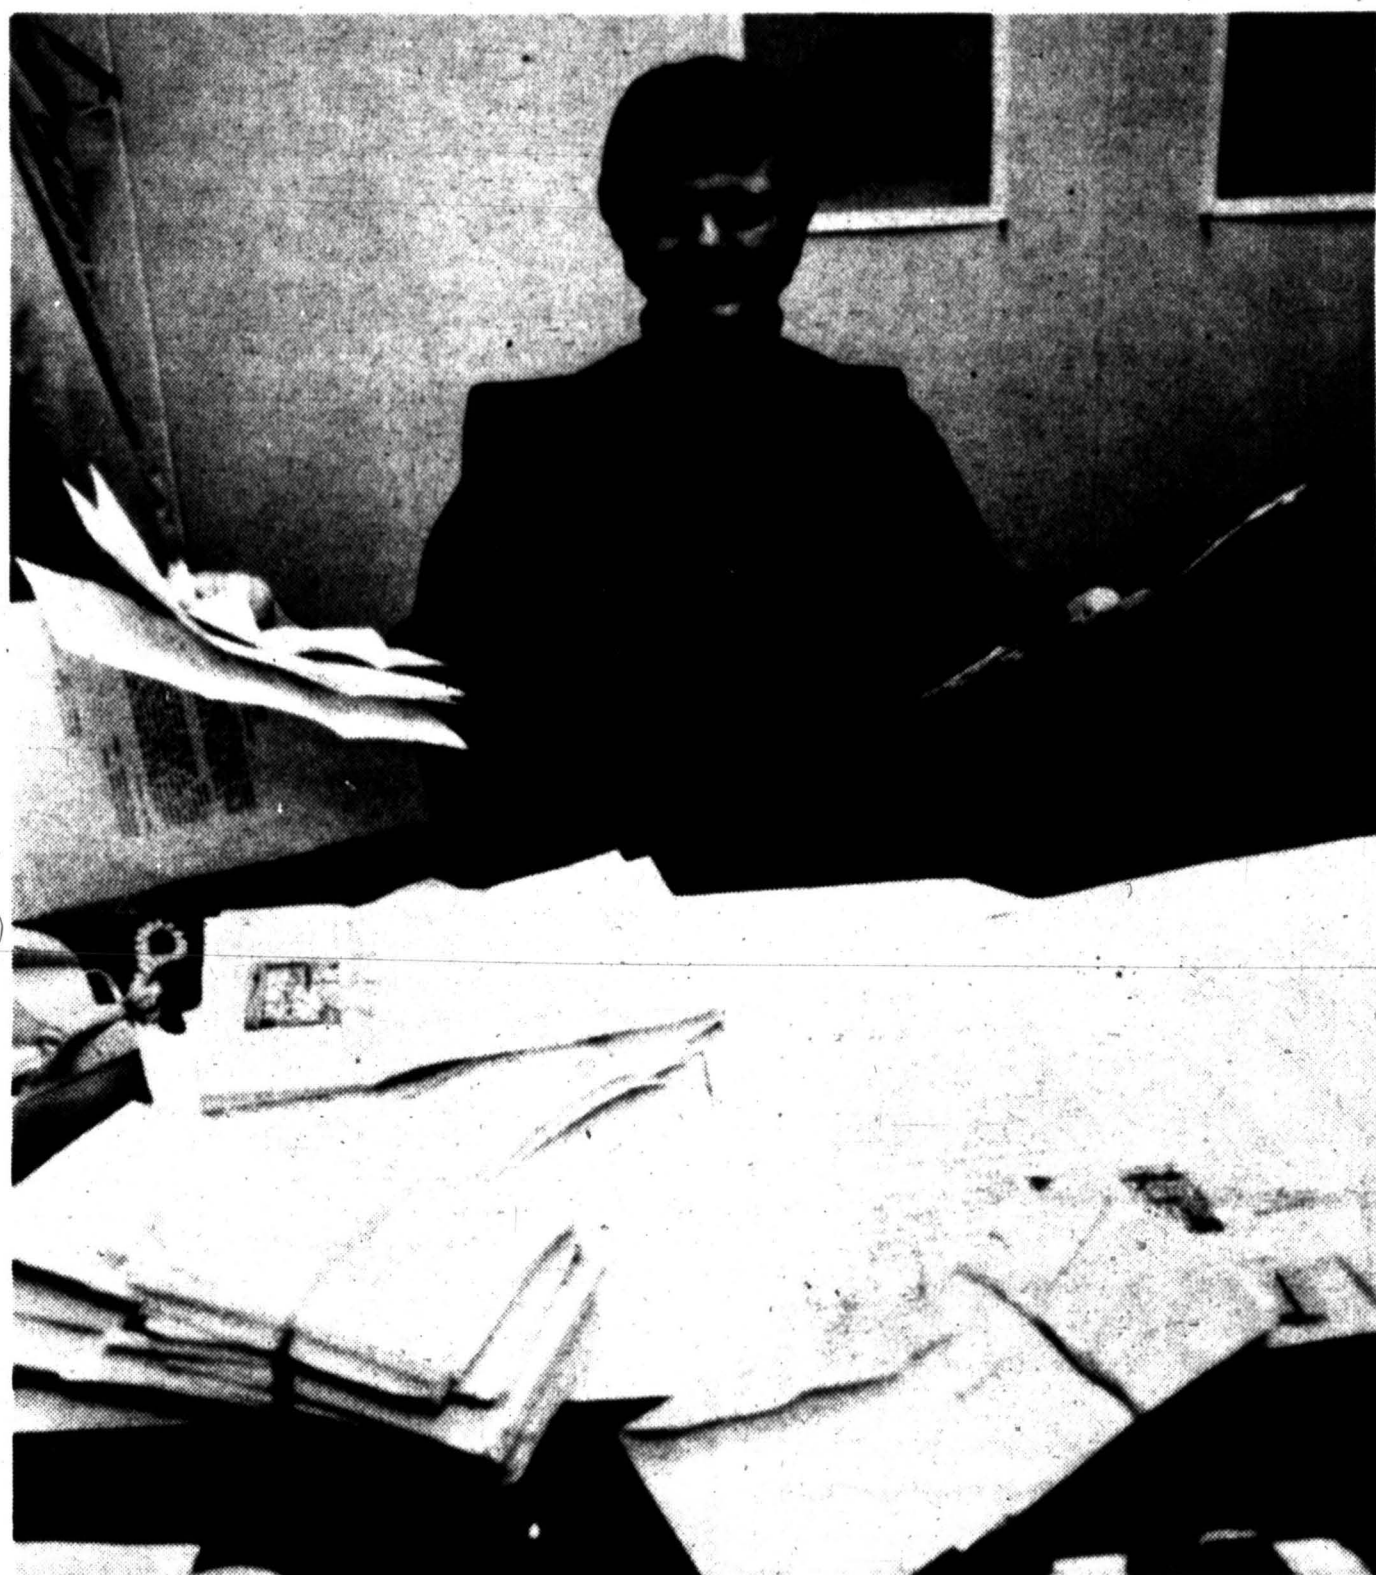

From Carmel High School: "(The) reduction would seriously curtail the public library services to our student population. The loss of county support for non-resident borrowers would cripple our student research endeavors. We cherish and use the opportunity to expose our students to the larger world they will live in through the valuable and gracious services of Harrison Memorial Library."

From Carmel: "In this day of high costs and diminishing tax returns, it strikes me as fanciful to talk of building a branch at the mouth of the Carmel Valley, especially since the Harrison Memorial Library provides such excellent service to those of us who live in the affected area."

From Spreckels: "From the start, the method by which the county has reimbursed the cities for county resident usage was a demonstration of fiscal irresponsibility on the county's part, either out of the cities' initial influence in creating the method or some less developed managerial accounting expertise. The reaction of the cities is to be expected. After all, they are about to be weaned from wasteful use of the taxpayer's money, in excessive payments from the county."

The Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees is expected to discuss the latest developments in the city-county budget battle when it meets Tuesday, March 30 at 4 p.m.

Trustees were originally scheduled to meet Tuesday, but the session was changed because of the March 23 supervisors meeting.

THE CITY-COUNTY library budget battle has generated more mail response to Fifth District Supervisor Bill Peters than any other

In engineer's estimate:

Water reclamation project costs continue to rise

COSTS CONTINUE to soar for the $18.2 million Carmel Sanitary District water reclamation project.

Project engineer Dick Dowd told the sanitary board March 19 that the price for the design portion of the project will increase by nearly $300,000 because "the project is significantly greater in magnitude and complexity than originally anticipated."

The news "upset" and "irritated" board President Charlotte Townsend, who appointed a special ad hoc committee of herself and Paul Beemer to investigate the reasons behind the increase.

That committee was expected to meet with Dowd, Dave Kennedy, president of Kennedy-Jenks engineers, and district manager Michael Zambory to study the new figures today (March 25).

"Try as hard as you can, things always seem to cost more than you expect," Mrs. Townsend said. "The more you delay construction, the more it's going to cost."

Townsend said she may call a special meeting of the board, depending on the outcome of the committee meeting today.

The increase must also be approved by the state Water Resources Control Board.

The $300,000 increase was the second revised cost estimate for the project in the past two months.

Previously, Dowd had informed the board that project costs will increase by nearly $5 million because of inflation and facilities that were added to the main project.

The water reclamation project is designed to provide tertiary treated effluent to irrigate golf courses. Several contracts have been signed with Pebble Beach Co. (formerly Pebble Beach Corp.) that provide a market for some of the reclaimed water — once the project is completed in 1985.

The project was undertaken in response to a state mandate that Carmel cease discharge of effluent into the bay between the months of May and October. The state has designated Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance.

THE BOARD also received some bad news on the status of its land exchange agreement with the state Department of Parks and Recreation.

The state indicated in a letter that design plans show a portion of a district building would be situated on state property.

In a letter to the board, Richard Felty, regional director, wrote:

Valley chamber to discuss Hatton Canyon Freeway

THE HATTON Canyon Freeway proposal will be the subject of discussion at a special forum to be sponsored by the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce April 2.

On hand to discuss the controversial project will be Henry Case, district director of programming for the State Department of Transportation, and Fifth District Supervisor William Peters.

Dick Krueger, president of the chamber, said the special forum was arranged because of the potential impact of the project on business in Carmel Valley and the surrounding area, and because of the lack of public understanding about the proposal.

"It's a subject generally recognized by almost everyone, but one understood and pursued by only a few — those who have a specialized interest in the outcome," Krueger said.

The public may make reservations to attend the forum by contacting the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce at 659-4000.

"CSD's proposal to construct buildings on the land to be exchanged by parks was not contemplated in the conceptual agreement and is an unacceptable proposal now."

Zambory said only a portion of the building would intrude onto state property, and that land is to be exchanged with the district later.

He claimed that original plans submitted to the Coastal Commission for approval show the location of the building.

"To change the plans now would cost a tremendous amount of money," he said. "It would cost $40,000 to $50,000. That's out of the question."

If the original design does not indicate the site of the building, Zambory said the district would install a screen to keep it out of view of bird watchers.

The district-state land swap involves 12 acres on the west side of Highway 1 between the Odello west property, the sewage treatment plant and Carmel Bay.

The district will trade 7.9 acres of its land designated by the Coastal Commission as a riparian habitat in return for a 3.9-acre state-owned parcel that is now farmed.

The district must also build a mound for bird watchers and screen its buildings from view as much as possible.

Zambory said Dowd will review design plans that were submitted to the state earlier before making a formal reply to Felty.

Supervisors will evaluate floodplain change March 30

AN AMENDMENT to the Carmel River floodplain ordinance to facilitate minor river maintenance projects will be considered by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors March 30.

Supervisors will hold a public hearing on the amendment at 1:30 p.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

The floodplain ordinance, as enacted last year by supervisors, requires issuance of a permit by the county for any sort of work within 200 feet of the river banks, and some Valley residents have protested that the restrictions are too severe to enable individual property owners to complete necessary river work.

The proposed amendment would give county flood control officials discretion to waive the permit requirement for river work which is deemed to be "very minor." This is the language of the proposed amendment:

"Any channel modification, or alteration of riparian vegetation within the river channel or on the riverbanks which, in the opinion of the district engineer and the director of planning would be of such a very minor nature that such projects could have no impact on the river, its visual appearance, habitat values or stability, are exempt from the other provisions of this ordinance. This exemption only applies if the proposed project is approved by the district engineer and director of planning prior to the commencement of the intended work."

GRADING operation west of Garland Regional Park on the Carmel River although highly visible from Carmel Valley Road — was authorized by a county building permit issued last June, before the Carmel River floodplain ordinance was enacted. Property owner John Randazzo is replacing riverbank material taken to form the approach to a bridge which he recently constructed over the river, according to the county building inspector's office. Operation of this type are now covered by provisions of the Carmel River floodplain ordinance. (Robert Miskimon photo).

Riles group formed

A group of Monterey Peninsula parents, business and educational leaders announced their formation of a local committee to support the reelection of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Wilson Riles.

Bob Faul of Carmel is treasurer of the committee.

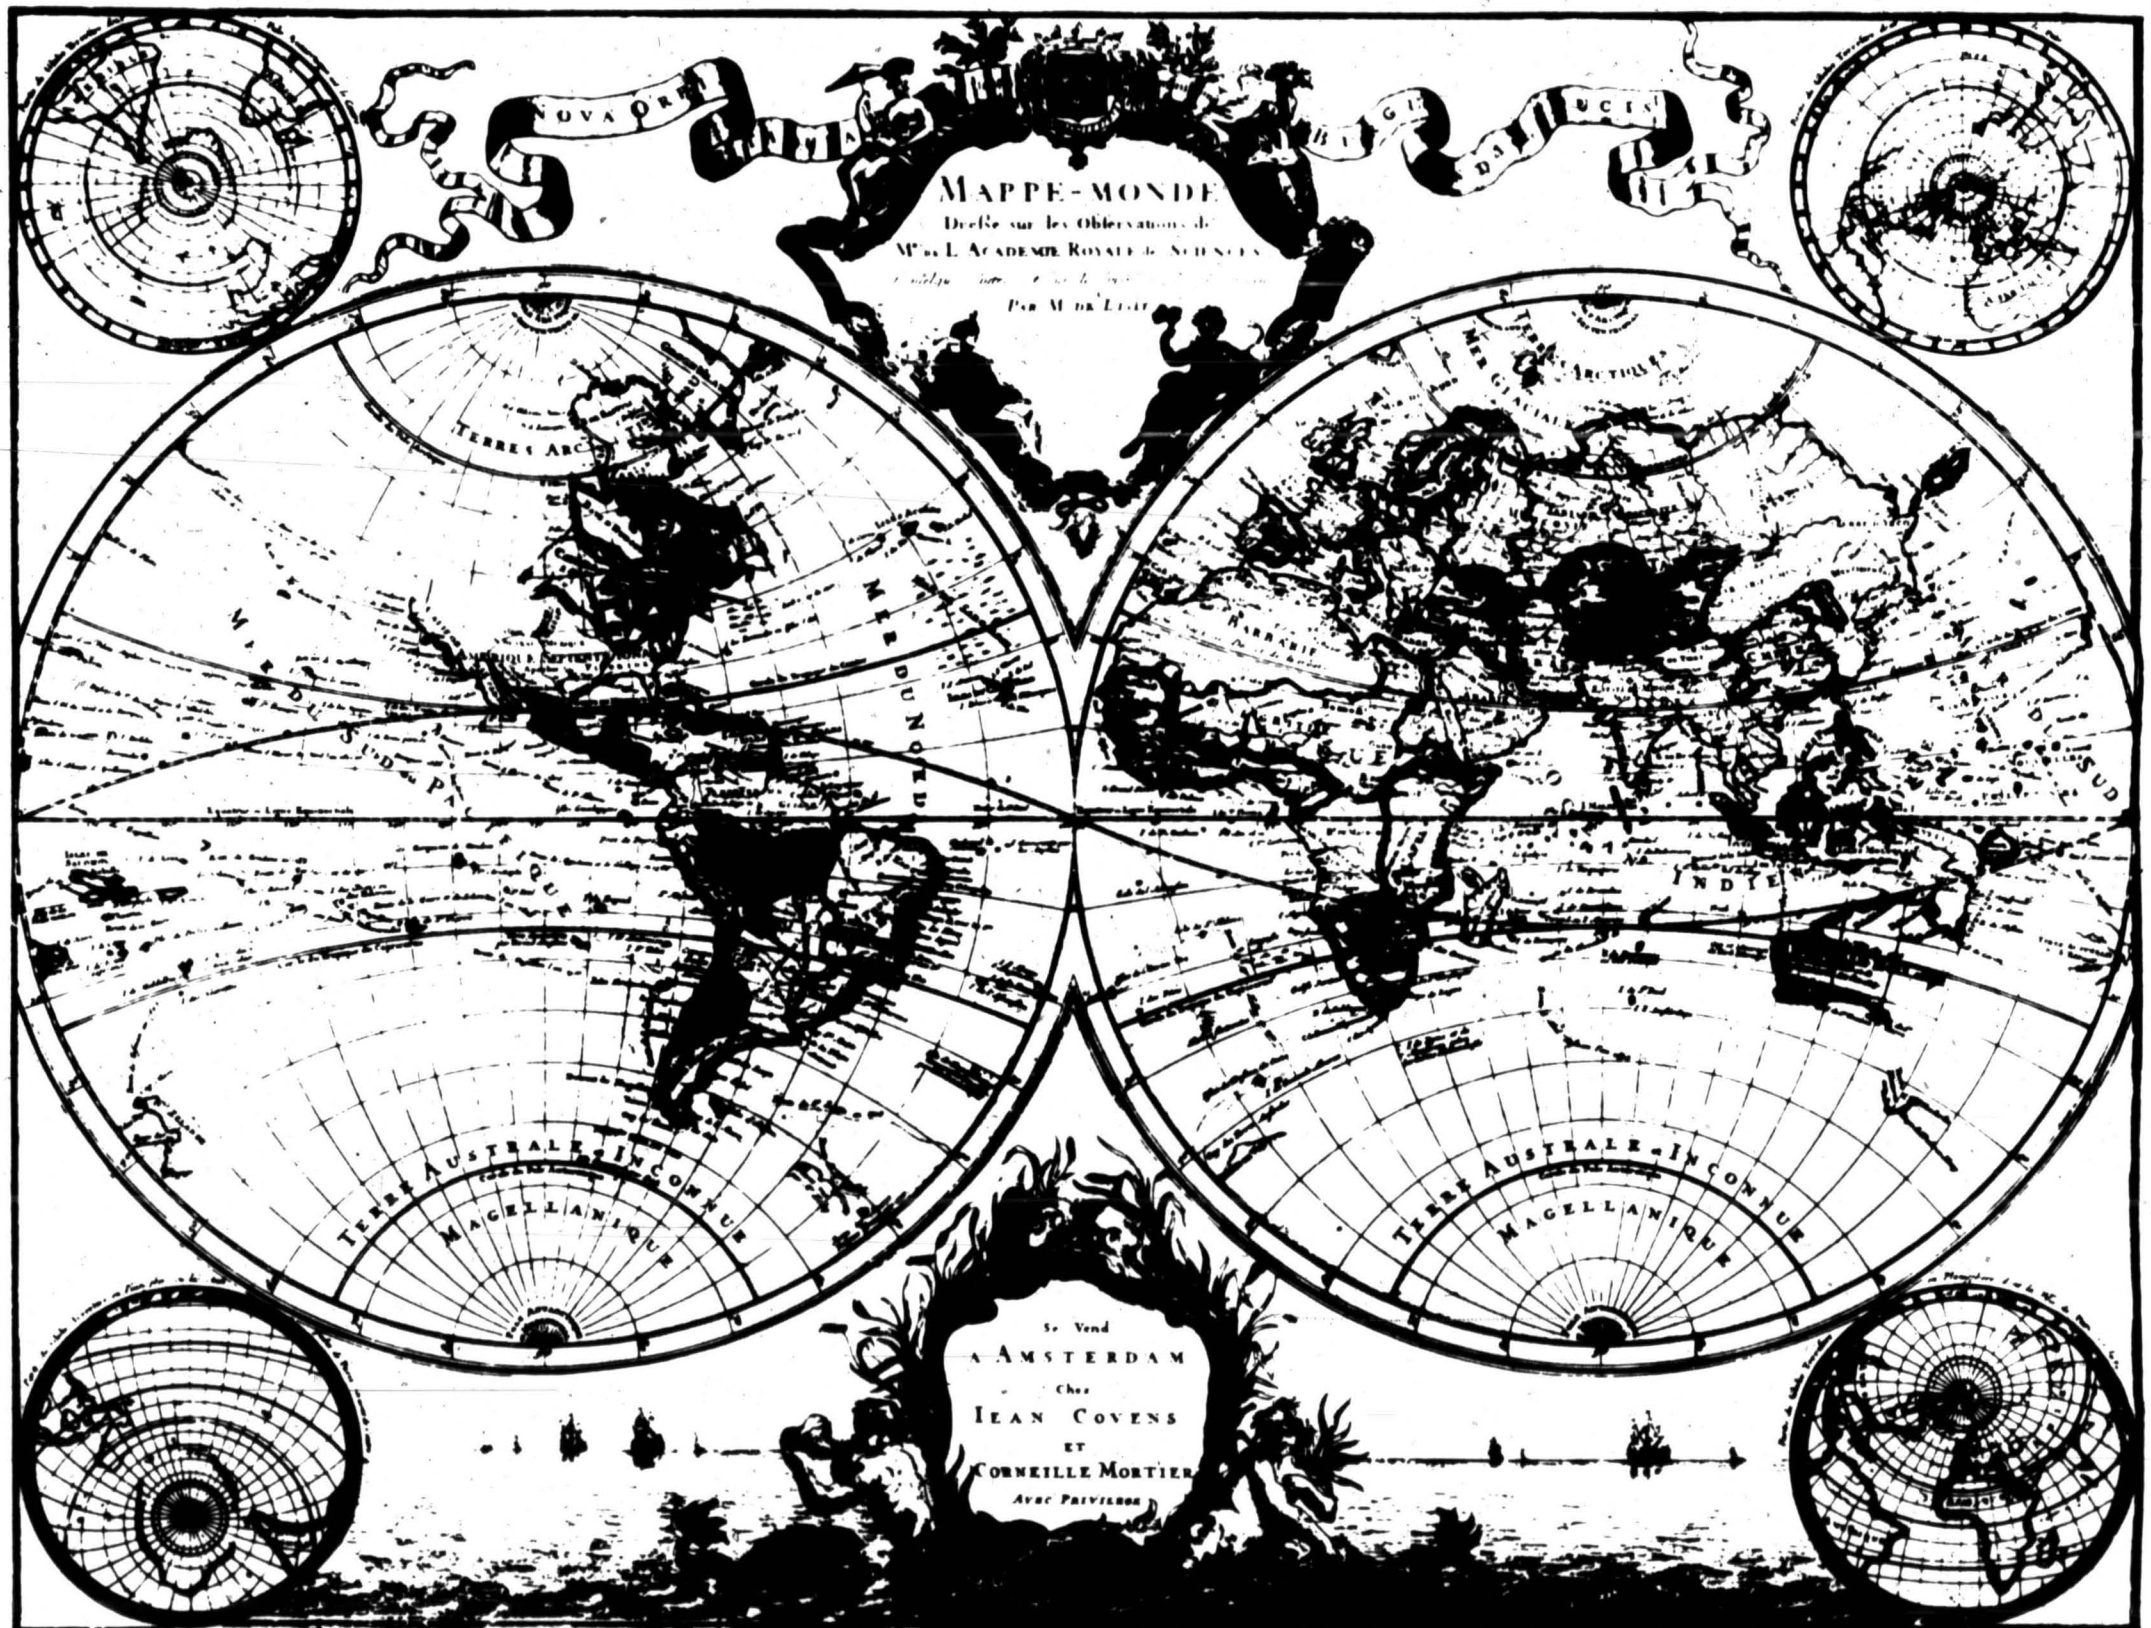

Peggy Bates was named as chairperson by the group.

Mrs. Bates said that a major reason for the Committee's support of Riles is that "while others have talked endlessly about local control and the power of local boards and parents, only Riles built a program based on local control; upon school site involvement of parents, teachers and principals, which is synonymous with his long standing struggle for school improvement."

Other local Riles supporters include Jane Day, retired Pacific Grove Unified School District board member, Dr. James Harrison, Superintendent of Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

Those interested in more information, or in attending a campaign committee meeting, are urged to contact Bob Faul, treasurer, 624-5257 or Linda Lee Bassett, co-chairperson, 394-5494.

Highlands hotel ruling expected

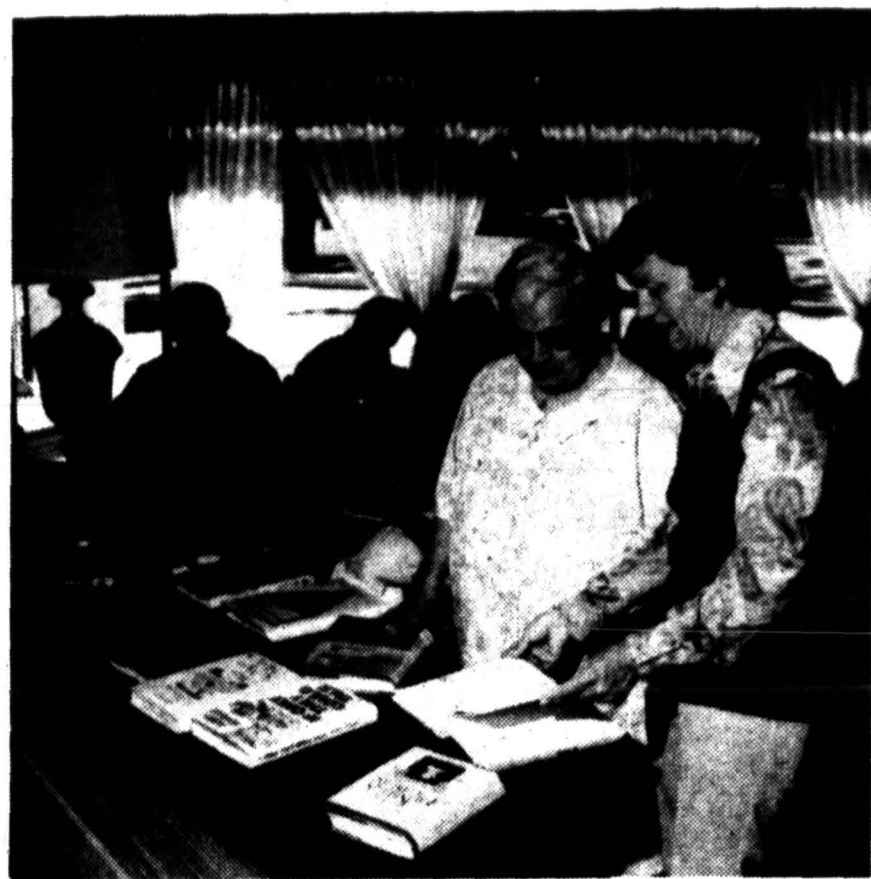

Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon is to rule on consistency of a proposed 24-unit hotel in Carmel Highlands March 25.

Gurries Management Co. wants to build the units to the west of Highway 1, but Slimmon has ruled unofficially that the project would be inconsistent with coastal planning laws.

The project must be found to be consistent with zoning and planning laws before a requested use permit can be considered, Slimmon said.

The item is scheduled for consideration at 1:30 p.m. in supervisors' chambers in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Business survey may die — no interest voiced

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PROPOSED survey of the Carmel business community designed to provide information for the revision of the 1973 general plan may die for lack of interest.

The Carmel Business Association was asked by the General Plan Advisory Committee for suggested questions that could be included in a survey on parking and traffic circulation.

LARRY LITTLE voiced concern over noise in the downtown area. (Michael Gardner photo).

At first, CBA Executive Secretary Lee Chamberlin indicated a representative would attend the March 18 session of the General Plan Advisory Committee. However, no one from the CBA attended.

Also not in attendance were advisory committee members Dr. Don Davidson, Alan Williams and Gene Hammond, who had supported approaching the merchants with the questionnaire idea.

After nearly an hour of discussion, the four committee members present unanimously decided to table the issue "due to the lack of interest from the public," said committee member Dorothy Lillard.

However, committee members said they should "leave the door open" for a future questionnaire. If the CBA wants to help, they would be willing to listen, the committee said.

CBA Executive Director Lee Chamberlin said March 22 that members did not attend the advisory committee session because of "prior commitments."

Asked whether the CBA was interested in helping with the survey, she replied: "I should hope so."

Chamberlin added that she would contact members and ask them to attend the April 1 advisory board meeting.

The survey would have asked employers questions on how many workers are employed, if they ride the bus, where they park and whether the business or the employees would financially support a parking garage at Sunset Center.

"The main thing the committee is interested in is parking and traffic. We should limit it to those two subjects," said member Gordon Campbell at the outset of the session.

Committee member Jean Grace supported the idea of a questionnaire. "I don't think anyone suffers from too much information. I don't think that knowing how they (the merchants) feel will hurt us," she said.

Larry Little, the only member of the public to speak on the issue, also supported a questionnaire.

"I suggest you utilize the business licenses and get names and addresses," Little said. He suggested the city would get better response by direct mail instead of using the CBA newsletter, which had been proposed at a previous meeting.

"It's not a religiously attended function," said Little, who is co-owner of Carmel Sands Lodge. "People will be more inclined to feel it is more serious (if the city does it)."

DESPITE THEIR support of the survey, committee members raised questions about costs and who would organize the survey.

"I think it's absolutely either they (the CBA) do it themselves or we do it," said Ms. Grace.

"If the information is vital to you purpose, it is important that you initiate it," Little said.

The apparent lack of enthusiasm for the questionnaire from the committee means it is now up to the CBA or one of the absent members to bring the issue up again.

In other action, the committee began its task of reviewing the elements in the 1973 Carmel General Plan.

Noise had the distinction of being the first element for discussion by the committee, which has been busy the past few months with questionnaires.

The committee decided to request inclusion in a new general plan of a provision that the city adopt an "enforceable noise ordinance," obtain a sound metering device for the police, and identify significant noise generating sites.

Little, again the only citizen to speak on the issue, said he lives downtown and has been bothered by noisy garbage trucks, city street sweepers and diesel trucks delivering fuel to gas stations.

Committee members suggested that a sound measuring device would prove helpful to ensure that such vehicles do not exceed acceptable noise levels.

Committee Chairwoman Jane Mayer suggested that consideration of the personal safety of residents be included in the general plan safety element.

"We talk about noise as a health hazard; why don't we talk about safe streets for people to walk on?" she asked.

She said key issues in the public safety element should include street lights, police and fire protection, road and sidewalk repair and transportation.

However, there was some question whether personal safety should be in the zoning document.

Campbell indicated that the general plan elements should address natural catastrophes and that personal safety be included in municipal laws and ordinances.

The committee decided to ask its consultant, Earth Metrics, whether personal safety issues should be included in the general plan. An Earth Metrics representative is expected to attend the April 15 meeting.

City may allow satellite stations, but they will not work for 10 more years

Carmel may allow the installation of small earth satellite stations, but at the permitted size, the television signal receiving devices will not be workable for another 10 years.

The planning commission was expected to approve an ordinance last night, March 24, that would ban the installation of earth satellite stations in the city unless they are less than 30 inches in diameter.

If the ordinance was approved by commissioners, the city council would hold a public hearing April 20 on the issue, said Planning Director Robert Griggs.

Paul Hariri, who owns Satellite Earth Stations of Carmel Valley, told commissioners March 17 that 30-inch diameter devices are not strong enough to receive the television signals from the 12 satellites that orbit the earth.

Griggs said an ordinance to limit the size of such devices is important because of the possible "visual impact" on the city.

Griggs cited the fact that Carmel regulates television antennae for the same reason, but he pointed out that antennae and earth satellite stations could not be banned arbitrarily.

Hariri, who said he demonstrates the devices at the mouth of the Valley "when it's not raining," said earth satellite stations are no longer than 12-feet high when installed at the proper 45-degree angle.

He added that the stations can receive up to 94 signals. Costs vary from $2,995 to $8,500.

Griggs said there have not been any applications for installation of an earth satellite station within the city limits.

Bayard Cousins

Public asked to assist in hunt for missing man

At the suggestion of a clairvoyant, a Virginia woman came to Carmel this week in search of her brother, who has been missing for seven years.

Jan Cousins Bragg of Arlington, Va. asked for assistance from police departments, Pine Cone/Outlook readers, and the general public in contacting her brother, Bayard William Cousins, 27.

Cousins is 6-foot-2.5 inches tall, with dark brown hair, hazel eyes and glasses. He weighs about 160 lbs. and has a fair complexion. The family has offered a reward for information leading to his safe return.

Cousins has been missing from his parents' home in Virginia Beach, Va. since 1975 when "he left a note saying he was off to do his own thing," his sister said Monday.

Ms. Bragg, a flight attendant with United Airlines, planned to remain on the Monterey Peninsula this week and then to visit friends in Newport Beach, before she returns to Virginia.

"I think he's alive," she said. "The FBI have no record of anything to do with him. My parents have been to a lot of detective agencies through the years looking for him. A few weeks ago, we contacted a clairvoyant in McLean, Va., who said he was in Carmel-by-the-Sea."

Ms. Bragg said her brother had completed three and one-half years as a student at the University of Virginia at the time of his disappearance. She said his interests include reading and libraries, photography, charity work, and projects to assist the poor, aged and migrant workers. She described him as "an ecology activist" who is fluent in Spanish.

Cousins, who had no known nicknames, had held summer jobs in restaurants, installing air conditioning equipment, and as a house painter, his sister said. His Social Security identification number is 224-70-6505.

Anyone with information on the whereabouts of Cousins may contact Ms. Bragg at 4650 S. 36th St., Arlington, Va., 22206, or c/o Robert Elliot, 5311 Seashore Drive, Newport Beach, Calif. 92663.

New shops opening all over the place!

By FLORENCE MASON

WHY HAS HOWARD BRUNN, doffing one hat as city councilman, put on another as the owner of two shops in The Crossroads?

This is what he said: "I believe The Crossroads is the trend of the future. It's quality retailing. What others are talking about, we are doing. And I wanted to be in on the ground floor."

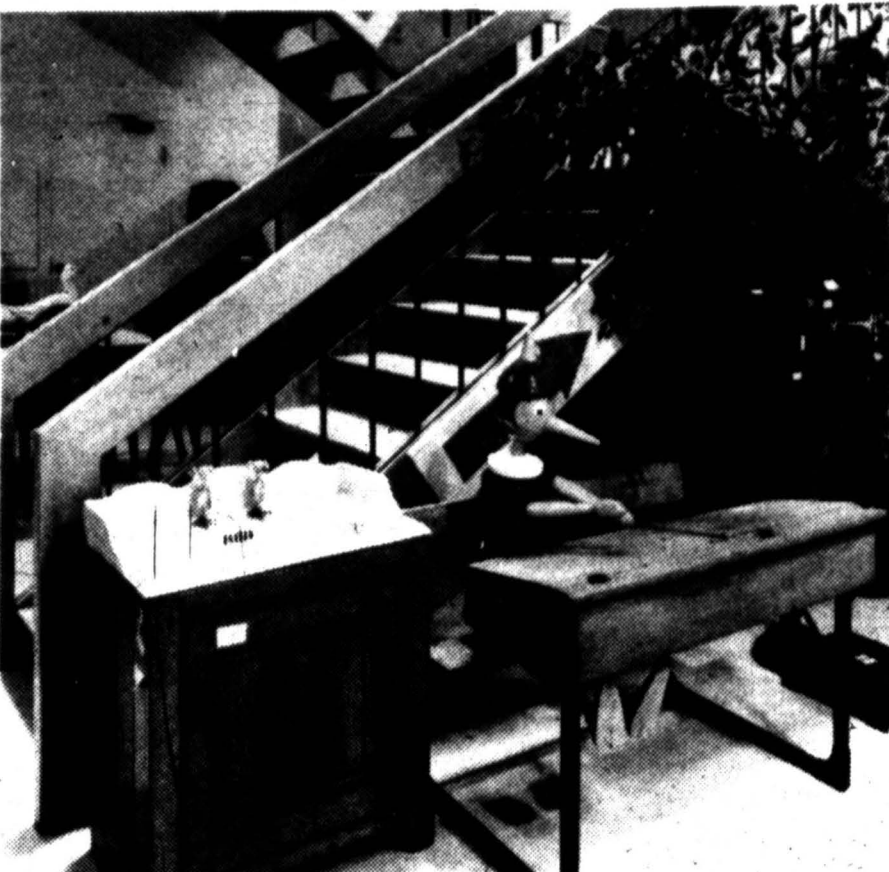

In on the ground floor he certainly is, quietly opening connecting shops, both named Carmel Mercantile Co., earlier this month. One emphasizes Danish and English turn-of-the-century pine furniture imported by Brunn on a pleasure and buying trip for which he had the experienced help of his wife, Courtney. The other has more contemporary items and gifts "for today's lifestyle." Brunn, who chose not to run for the City Council again, will be actively involved in the operation of both stores.

Also helping with the project — especially the displays — is the Brunn's daughter Vance, who, with her mother, owns Poster Graphics in Carmel Plaza. Another daughter, Karen Rees, was also there the day we stopped by, answering phones and questions with great poise.

A local artist is contributing a special poster for the stores. Kipp Stewart's work will no doubt reflect the "today" colors — pastel peach, rose and melon — that Brunn is featuring. When the poster is finished, there will be an "event" to celebrate its completion and the stores' opening.

The special characteristic of the Carmel Mercantile Co., Brunn told me, is that it offers the best of a collection of merchandise he has been "screening out" over a period of 25 years in business. "Plus a young, fresh approach to retailing that you just have to see." Included in the collection are products of local artisans and craftspeople; for example, mohair afghans made by Laela Leavy of Big Sur.

When Brunn told me on the phone that it was hard to summarize or characterize his merchandise, I thought, "Oh, sure." But he was right; you really have to see it. Among the imports are a meat safe (I call it a cooler), a rolltop desk with extra "nooks and crannies," and an assortment of pine night stands with marble tops. In the "today" store there are stuffed animals — large and very small — made from old quilts by a woman in Texas (if you can stand the idea of cutting up those old quilts; if not, you can buy one of the originals). There are mugs, including a specially delightful one with a cat and fishbowl. Colored paper "by the pound," with matching envelopes. Other unusual paper items. Things for the kitchen. And a nice touch — fresh spring flowers.

Howard Brunn's relationship with Carmel goes back to his childhood. Raised here, he was class president at Carmel High and acted in plays at the Forest Theater. He opened his first store in 1955, a men's shop in the Pine Inn. Others followed: The Entrepot Gourmet Shop, the 1887 Shop, Mark Fenwick and then his role as one of the founding partners of the Carmel Bay Company. All of which helped to prepare him for this newest enterprise.

"I never planned to retire," he said. "I was into real estate but the market was so dismal I looked elsewhere and was caught up in the excitement of The Crossroads."

In addition to his real estate license, Brunn is a licensed twin-engine airplane pilot. He is on the board of directors of the Monterey Jazz Festival and Talbott, Inc., among a variety of other interests. Today, however, there is nothing more exciting to him than the Carmel Mercantile Co.

... AND ANOTHER OPENING

Another opening at The Crossroads soon—with its owner enjoying her first foray into the business world for herself — is The Beauty Shop. What the name may not tell you is that it is a complete hair care service for both men and women.

THE VARIETY of useful and decorative items for sale in Howard Brunn's second Carmel Mercantile Co. store in The Crossroads is well illustrated here. The shops open into each other; the feeling of each is distinctive.

Beatrice McColez has been in Carmel 20 years "this time." Originally from Gonzales, she moved to Carmel when she was a child. "Bea" lived elsewhere for a time when she was married, but after her husband's death she returned to the place she considered home.

The shop, sparkling new and attractive, with unusual use of wood in cabinets and chairs, has four stations. When I talked with Mrs. McColez, she was still interviewing for three of them; the fourth is reserved for herself. She sounded excited about having her first business, after many years' experience in other beauty shops in the area.

ALICE MAY'S SUCCESS STORY

Alice May is enthusiastic when she talks about banking, especially as a career for women today.

"Today's women in banking have the opportunity to advance on their own merits," she said. "It used to take much longer."

Mrs. May should know. She has had a distinguished career in banking from the day she walked into the "old" Bank of Carmel in 1950 and got herself a job as bookkeeper until her just-announced promotion to assistant vice president and operations officer of the "new" National Bank of Carmel. "That's where I started and where I'm happy to wind up," she said.

Not long after she started with the Bank of Carmel, Mrs.

ALICE MAY is an enthusiastic proponent of banking as a career for women.

May "retired" to await the birth of her first child. She stayed home with that son for four years, then returned to the same bank until it merged with a larger one, where she accumulated most of her experience, including teller, head teller, the note department, operations office, manager, senior lending officer.

Her husband, Jacob, now a retired rural route mail carrier for the Carmel post office, was born and raised here. The couple met in the East, then came back here to live. Now they have a home in Mission Fields and a cabin in Carmel Valley to which they go for weekends of tennis and just relaxing, often joined by their two sons.

Relaxing has become increasingly important for Alice May as she takes on her new position. What is included? Personnel functions, she said, and the daily operations of the bank, including training, customer contact, and assisting the staff in many different ways.

CHEZ DANIELE AND CARMEL — "WE LIKE IT THAT WAY"

The Business License and Code Review Board, not easily impressed, complimented Barry Pearlman when he appeared March 11 as the new owner (with his wife, Susan) of Chez Daniele. We reported the change of ownership in an earlier column, learning more about the new owners and their plans at the formal hearing.

This is one case where the incoming owners did make a thorough marketing study before embarking on their purchase. (It seems to me, in reporting new businesses over several years now, that this is too seldom accomplished. Many people who come to Carmel and become owners of local businesses do so with just a hope and a prayer.) It was to be expected that the Pearlman's would take the careful approach, however, inasmuch as Barry had been a marketing vice president in a corporate setting for eight years.

Pearlman emphasized that it is important to them to avoid any sense of change. "People are satisfied with Chez Daniele as it is," he told the board. So the transition from owners Serge and Daniele Mandelman has been very gradual, with Pearlman and his wife serving as "management employees" for several months.

Now, even though formal transfer of ownership may not take place until early May, Barry Pearlman is the host and waiter while Mrs. Pearlman is "the key chef." Being such an active part of the operation, they hope to maintain "the same tone." Pearlman described that as not being primarily tourist-oriented but more for local business people, except for Sunday brunch, which does attract many visitors.

What impressed the board was the extent to which Pearlman "had done his homework" in relation to the various processes through which a business owner must go when taking over in Carmel: use permit, license approval, sign approval, etc. Pearlman's reply: "Outsiders may be put off by the way this city operates, but we like it the way it is." In keeping with their appreciation for things as they are, they will retain the restaurant's well-known name as part of the value they found in purchasing it.

IRA I AND II

If you are at Independent Realty Associates on Fifth and are looking for IRA II, just walk down to the corner and make a right turn.

The real estate firm, established in Carmel less than two years ago, has just been given approval for a second office. The firm is taking over space vacated by another real estate company, Larry Parent, which will now maintain just two offices (Pacific Grove and Monterey).

According to Dick Schofield, co-owner with Harriette Mason of IRA, they are happy to have the second, smaller office so close by (Dolores, just north of Fifth). It was at the suggestion of Fire Marshal Vern Allred and acting Police Chief Bob Fischer that the firm added I and II to their name and signs, to avoid confusion between the two locations in an emergency.

LUMBER — THIS SIDE OF THE HILL

Those ads that said "Soon you will not have to go over the hill" for your lumber needs meant that Hayward Lumber Co. is opening a sales office in Carmel. Appropriately, it will be in the office space being vacated by Carmel Builder's Supply, on Junipero between Third and Fourth.

"We are not planning to acquire the property; it's too expensive for a lumber yard," Hank Esler, representing owner

Homer Hayward, said. "We'll just be using the office there until we can locate a permanent place in Carmel or Carmel Valley."

The company will take orders here and will offer a few "pick-up" items for sale. Major building materials will still go directly from their Pacific Grove store to the building sites. And they'll still have their Salinas center, as well as offices in Hollister, Paso Robles and Morro Bay.

Hayward Lumber hopes to be in business in Carmel as soon as the Carmel Builder's Supply inventory is liquidated. That could be early next month.

GUILIANO'S SCORES

Its wine—and its design—are two of the good things about Guiliano's Restaurant that have gained a measure of fame for the Italian restaurant since its opening last December.

Susan Negri, co-owner with her husband, Robert, and Randel Swedburg, told us that we should be watching for an article about the restaurant in Interior Design magazine, probably in the August issue. The restaurant gained particular notice when designer Scott Lamb of San Francisco did a mock-up of its interior for a trade center.

As for the wine: Guiliano's wine list is featured in an article about wine tours of northern California and good wine lists; the article appeared in the March issue of Wine Spectrum, a newspaper for wine buffs.

The Italian restaurant on Mission has also attracted celebrities, including Gore Vidal, author-turned-politician, when he was in town on a recent weekend. But Mrs. Negri told me that their clientele is about 65 percent local. It is those local guests to whom she made particular reference when she said, "I listen to everything they say about the restaurant."

There are more special dinners to come — dinners like those that inaugurated the restaurant in the gala week of its opening. One will feature a Madeira that is 122 years old. It will be used in desserts and will also be available for tasting.

PATIENCE, VOLTAGE A WINNING PAIR

Horsewoman Patience Prine of Carmel attended a Judges and Instructors seminar for side saddle in Mt. Holly, N.J. in January. The seminar, held only once a year, was in conjunction with the annual Awards Banquet of the International Side Saddle Organization. Ladies from every part of the U.S. attended. Patience received awards for her Arabian Stallion, Hi Voltage, who was named champion Arabian side saddle horse in the U.S. as well as champion for all breeds in California.

The Instructors and Judges Seminar covered all phases of side saddle riding, equipment, manners, costumes and habits. Upon completion, Miss Prine received her ISSO Certification as an instructor and judge for side saddle. She is the first in the Western states to become a certified side saddle judge and instructor.

Last month, Patience and Hi Voltage won top honors at the prestigious Scottsdale, Ariz. Arabian show. Not only did they win the ladies side saddle class but were named "Scottsdale Top Ten" in English Pleasure, Owner-Amateur to Ride. In addition to all these honors, Miss Prine has been notified by the International Arabian Horse Association that Hi Voltage has earned, through competition in 11 shows, the coveted IAHA Legion of Honor Award. He is the 345th Arabian horse to be awarded this honor and is privileged to wear a "plus" symbol as part of his name.

column, decided on a name for her lingerie and linen shop on Dolores. It's to be "Amourette." Business License and Code Review Board secretary Karen Love came up with the definition: "a love affair or passing flirtation." Ms. Tension added that it also means Cupid. In any event, it turned out to be more legible on the shop's sign and so takes precedence over the earlier suggestions: "Amoretto" and "Inamorata."

The Sticky Wicket closed its doors; about May 1, "L'Amandine" will open at that location. It's on the south side of Ocean near Lincoln.

Sticky Wicket owners Dennis and Pat Rowedder emphasized that they had not sold the name or their English tea room concept. Indeed, it will have quite a different ambience under new owners Pierre and Eliane Boissiere, whose name most of you will recognize from their present Mission Street Patisserie. Mrs. Boissiere told me that the new restaurant would be quite similar to the Patisserie in menu, but will have a different atmosphere. The name, by the way, defines a delicious French cake made with almonds. The Boissieres will offer lunch, dinner and an a la carte menu at their second restaurant, which fulfills their dream of acquiring an Ocean Avenue location.

As for the Rowedders, they admit to being "a little tired." Specific plans are indefinite, "apart from going sailing," Rowedder said. And Mrs. R. will continue to operate her designer jeans and sweater shop just inside the entrance to Paradise mall.

LUNCHEON-FASHION SHOW AT LA PLAYA TO BENEFIT ERA

The Garden Room at La Playa Hotel was the scene of a gala luncheon and fashion show last Saturday. The event sponsored by NOW (National Organization for Women) was in support of the ongoing fund-raising efforts of the national ERA.

About 100 guests enjoyed a no-host cocktail hour followed by a Marco Polo lunch.

Co-ordinator for the event was Ann Rudolph. Fashion styles for the woman on the move were provided by M'Lady Bruhn of Carmel. Lidia Smith Segal was commentator. Linda Moore, owner of the High Hatter Shop, provided custom made hats for the show.

The eight models, all career women, who showed the fashions were Karen Bartholomew, Carole Anderson, Loris Langdon, Carol Taylor, Claire Curley, Bonnie Hunter, Melodie Fields and Catherine Door.

Theme of the luncheon was "Working Women Styles for ERA" and a bit of humor was added by regular "Men Working" signs which were changed to read "Women Working" and placed around the room.

Co-chairmen for the affair were Mrs. Rose Higgs and Mrs. Lillian Bitney. Music was provided by professional flutist Kenny Stahl.

All proceeds from the fund-raiser will be forwarded to the ERA home office in Washington, D.C.

ANTOINETTE HAMM CELEBRATES 90TH BIRTHDAY

Antoinette (Toni) Hamm, a Carmel resident for the past 50 years, celebrated her 90th birthday on March 6. The party was held at the Lazarro Drive home of Toni's daughter and son-in-law, Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Glynn Prine.

The long driveway leading to the house, which affords views of Point Lobos, Fish Ranch and Carmel Valley, was adorned with colorful streamers and balloons and lined with blooming irises, daffodils and other spring flowers.

About 50 family members and friends attended the celebration at which champagne brunch and gourmet hors d'oeuvres were served. The many birthday gifts included numerous floral bouquets and a variety of plants.

Guests included Toni's son, Charles Hamm of Carmel, her granddaughters Patience Prine of Carmel and Dee Trundle and her sons, Ryan and Patrick of Watsonville. Toni's sister, Mrs. Walton Streightiff of Pacific Grove was also present.

Out of town guests included Ray Halton of Iowa Falls,

Iowa, and his grandson Rick Whiteside of Playa del Rey; Mrs. Hope Weydeveld and her grandson Christopher of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fritz, also from Cheyenne; Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Cecil Bilger of Saratoga and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bloomer of Antioch.

The unusual and very beautiful party invitations read: "We are honoring this remarkable woman-mother-grandmother-great-grandmother."

"She is always so bright and cheery and is the mainstay for us all. As she approaches her 10th decade, one of her rare complaints is that she can't get around as well as she used to. However, she still keeps her own house, cares for her son Charles, tends her garden, cooks and bakes the most wonderful creations and enjoys visitors — as we all thrive on popping into 'grandma's' for wise advice, good food and inspiration."

"We hope you can be with us to celebrate this extraordinary person and let her know how well she is loved by so many."

"The only present we request is your presence."

All we can add to such a loving tribute is that we, too, wish Toni a happy, healthy and prosperous year.

Happy Belated Birthday, Toni!

LOCALS BRING HOME NEWS ON DAME JUDITH

David and Mary Hughes are home in Carmel after an exciting vacation in New York and Washington. While in New York, the couple took in shows such as Sugar Babies and Othello. Then it was on to Washington to see longtime friend Dame Judith Anderson and to watch her perform in Medea, the play originally written for Dame Judith by Carmel's famous poet, Robinson Jeffers.

The play recently opened in the Kennedy Center's Eisenhower Theater, but David and Mary — with other Carmelites Jo and Dick Roberts — attended the press performance three days before the public opening.

Dame Judith, now in her mid 80's, plays the part of the nurse with the lead played by Zoe Caldwell. A review from the Washington Post says in part: "As it happens, Caldwell is taking on the challenge under the very nose of Anderson herself, who has been lured back to the stage in her mid-80s to play the role of the nurse. Time has not eroded the gravity of Anderson's voice nor the dignity of her presence. She gives a touching performance as the befuddled witness to Medea's horrible acts, but even if she didn't, her presence alone would be touching. Unlike European theater, the American theater is more cavalier about matters of tradition. In the Eisenhower, one senses — above and beyond the particular distinctions of this revival — that a torch is being passed along."

Each year Dame Judith lends her wit and talent to the annual Robinson Jeffers Festival, usually giving spellbinding readings of Jeffers works. This year's festival will be held the weekend of Oct. 8-10 and Dame Judith plans to be here and to participate.

sponsored on a national level by BMW of North America in New York City. The local tournament was sponsored by Kent Nelson of Motorsports LTD of Monterey.

The weekend event included men's and women's singles and doubles.

The Racquet Club donated all of their facilities and Ernie Saunders, assistant manager of the club, spent a lot of time working on the project.

Balls, towels and trophies were donated by BMW of North America.

A cocktail and awards party was co-hosted by the Deep Six Lounge and Motorsports LTD, both of Monterey, at the Racquet Club Sunday evening. All proceeds from the event will benefit the American Heart Association. Anne McGowan, chairman of the local chapter of the American Heart Association, attended the festivities on Sunday and received the proceeds check.

Carmelites who worked up a fast heart beat for a worthy cause include Tom Sherburne, Vince LaRocca, Jill Leach, Mary Moore, Tony Marseguerra, John Campbell, Ed Leslie, and Jack Carney.

This tournament was the first in a series that Kent hopes to sponsor. He's already generating interest in the idea by talking to various club owners.

GREAT RIVERBOAT GAMBOL SMASHING SUCCESS

It looked like Rancho Canada from the outside — but once you stepped foot inside there was no question that you were on the Jester Queen embarked on a river cruise!

The big event was the bi-annual Great Gambol, a fun-raising event of the Jesters to benefit the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. The gala was held last Saturday evening and drew about 300 guests who climbed over cotton bales and tapped their toes to some lively banjo music.

Upon entering the Queen, guests were greeted by beautiful floral arrangements and a ceiling full of diamond-shaped foil prisms which were attached to the chandeliers and sparkled in the light.

Big signs pointed to the casino where pit boss Bill Walton kept a close eye on the players at the ten blackjack tables, two poker tables (five card stud and draw at each) a roulette table and two crap tables.

There was no lack of loot as famous buccaneer Jimmy Root and his band of pirates had recently raided the Coast and sortied from Hawaii to the slopes by Squaw Valley Inn, the Las Vegas Riviera and the North Star off the shores of Lake Tahoe to come up with prizes ranging in value from $2 to $2,500.

The walls of the casino were covered with river scenes bordered by shutters and if there was any question as to whether or not the Queen was actually on the high seas, all one had to do was look toward the end of the room where the huge windows were covered with a water scene replete with "wake" from the Queen.

Captain Cap'n Jack Kenaston and his first mate Polly, as well as many other hard-working Jesters, were on hand to welcome guests.

Gambling came to a halt when Helen and Gordon Craig (in charge of entertainment) presented the Diamond Lils and Dapper Dans in several song-and-dance routines in three separate floor shows throughout the evening. Good old river boat music was provided by Gordon Duffy on piano and Ben Blakeman on banjo. The entertainment was in top professional style and received rousing applause.

Following a bountiful buffet which was served in the dining room, guests returned to the gaming tables prior to the 11 p.m. auction which offered an array of fabulous goods.

All the Jesters can surely accept a solid pat on the back for this event which made a fist full of dollars for a very worthy cause.

MR. AND MRS. JOHNNY RIVERS are pictured at their wedding reception at the Whaling Station Inn Restaurant on Cannery Row following their wedding at their Big Sur ranch.

The 100-plus car caravan that wound its way up the coast from Big Sur to Cannery Row last Sunday afternoon wasn't an overload of tourists. Actually, they were on their way to John Pisto's Whaling Station Inn Restaurant in Monterey to attend the wedding reception of Johnny Rivers and Christi Zable, who were married at Johnny's Big Sur ranch earlier in the day.

The wedding ceremony was held on a mountaintop on the ranch and was something to behold. The weather was sunny and warm and not a trace of wind or rain marred the event.

Handsome Johnny, dressed in a tailor-made cream-colored suit, waited on the mountain as his bride arrived in a carriage drawn by a beautiful white horse. Christi wore a salmon-colored old-fashioned wedding gown made especially for the occasion by her grandmother.

Family attending the event included Johnny's parents, John and Nancy Ramistella of Carmel and his brother, Frank Ramistella and his wife, Diane, and their two children, Siena and John Christian. Frank acted as Johnny's best man and Diane was matron of honor. Siena was flower girl. Ring bearer was the bride's nephew, two-and-a-half year old Neal Preston. Preston.

Also attending were Christi's parents, her father Larry Zabel and his wife Sharon, and her mother Marie Hanning and her husband, Leonard.

About 150 relatives and friends attended the champagne wedding reception and dinner at the Whaling Station Inn. Many of the guests were Johnny's friends from Los Angeles who are in the entertainment or record business.

John Pisto, a long-time friend of the Carmel Ramistellas, outdid himself at the buffet table. Nationally famed for the original cuisine and outstanding California wines served at both the Whaling Station Inn and Domenico's on Fisherman's Wharf, Pisto created a lavish groaning board laden with baby quail, roast suckling pig, oysters on the half shell, Monterey Bay prawns, three kinds of cold salmon, marinated artichokes, roast turkey and ham and every conceivable trimming, all arrayed around an impressive ice sculpture of two swans.

Along with Elvis Presley and Ricky Nelson, Johnny was a big rock star in the '60s. In 1960, after struggling for years, Johnny was asked to "fill in" for a few nights at a popular local club called Gazzarri's. He was then offered a one-year contract to appear at a new club opening on the Sunset Strip, called the Whiskey A Go-Go. Before his contract was completed Johnny had scored with three gold records. His album Live at the Whiskey A Go-Go proved to be an international best-seller for Imperial Records.

Continuing his long string of chart records on the Imperial label, the following five years produced nearly two dozen hit singles. This chain of hits, produced by Lou Adler, eventually amassed record sales of over 20 million.

Later, Johnny and Adler initiated the formation of Dunhill Records. Dunhill brought into prominence such formidable performers as The Mamas and the Papas, Barry McGuire, Scott McKenzie, and The Grass Roots.

Johnny soon had his own record company, Soul City, and publishing firm, Rivers Music. A lounge act called The Versatiles caught his attention. He changed their name to The Fifth Dimension and produced their first hit, Up, Up and Away, which won two Grammy awards, one for "Record of the Year" and another for Johnny as its producer.

The success story goes on and on. Johnny is as busy as ever and is currently producing records, doing concert tours and working on a gospel album.

Because of his work, Johnny and Christi will spend much of their time at their home in Los Angeles but you can bet they will sneak away to their Big Sur ranch as often as possible.

And now for the big news — today is the day that Christi will be told by Johnny that they are on their way to Europe for a long honeymoon.

Congratulations Christi and Johnny!

THE BRIDEGROOM'S PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. John Ramistella of Carmel, welcome guests at the wedding reception.

THE BRIDE'S PARENTS welcome guests to the reception. They are, from left, the bride's father, Larry Zabel and his wife, Sharon, and the bride's mother, Marie Hanning and her husband Leonard.

THE BRIDE accepts congratulations from her mother-in-law, Mrs. John Ramistella.

ADMIRING THE BEAUTIFUL buffet at the wedding reception are Whaling Station Inn owner and executive chef John Pisto, and the bridegroom's brother, Frank Ramistella.

new arrivals

Jeffrey Colton Kraft

Two and one-half-year-old Julie Kraft is delighted with the arrival of her baby brother, Jeffrey Colton Kraft. Jeffrey who has been nicknamed "Colt" because his father is a horse lover, was born at Community Hospital at 8:57 a.m. Feb. 4. He weighed 8 pounds, 13 ounces and was 21.5 inches long. He has just a bit of blond hair and big blue eyes.

Colt is the son of Gregory and Teresa Kraft of Carmel Valley. His dad is a broker with Christopher Bock Realty in Carmel and his mom was a dental hygienist before she retired to raise a family.

The baby's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kraft of Pacific Grove and Mrs. Gabrielle Leonardi of Highland Park, Ill. Grandma Gabrielle visited for a week and enjoyed spoiling the entire family, including her new grandson.

Colt loves to eat and his mom says that may account for the fact that he is growing "four times faster" than the average baby. "As long as he can eat, he's perfectly happy," said the new mother.

There's no question that when he's old enough, Colt will have his own pony. His dad already owns two beautiful Arabians and there's plenty of room for one more.

Welcome to the world, Colt!

Marshall Rangga Permadi

It's a boy!

Marshall Rangga Permadi greeted the world at Community Hospital on Feb. 3. He checked in at 11:35 p.m., weighed 7 pounds, 15 ounces and was 21 inches long. He has black hair and brown eyes.

Marshall is the son of Nicole and Nicco Permadi of Carmel. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Mohamed Engkun of Java, Indonesia and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hydorn of Carmel.

The baby's dad is a landscaper and his mom is hotel manager at the Seaview Inn in Carmel.

Marshall was born naturally and along with his dad, his grandma Diane was also in the delivery room.

His parents say Marshall is a fantastic baby who rarely cries. His dad is an active parent who doesn't balk when it comes to sharing the chores — which frequently include night duty.

The Permadis say they plan to present their son with a brother or sister in about four years. They admit that for now they have their hands full keeping up with Marshall.

Welcome to the world, Marshall!

Tanner Bruce Sheldon

Little Tanner Bruce Sheldon took his own sweet time before checking into the world but when he did decide to make his appearance, he didn't give his mother much warning. She says she almost didn't make it to the hospital in time for Tanner to make a proper entrance.

Tanner was born at Community Hospital at 5:58 a.m., Feb. 9. He weighed 9 pounds, 11 ounces and was 21 inches long, and just like his dad he has blond hair and big blue eyes.

He is the son of Bruce and Sue Sheldon of Carmel Valley. His dad is manager of the Carmel Valley Racquet Club and loves to carry Tanner around the Club and show him off like a trophy, said Tanner's mom, who is in charge of child care at the club.

Also welcoming Tanner into the family is his four and one half year old brother, Robbie, who was at the hospital when Tanner was born. Shortly thereafter Robbie said to his mom: "Okay, Mom, let's go home now!" He also wanted to know when he could have another brother.

Tanner's grandparents are Mrs. Claudine Lyman of Pacific Grove and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sheldon of Santa Rosa.

Chivas Graham DeVinck

Little Chivas Graham DeVinck has already picked up the nickname of "Scotch and Crackers" but his mom says she hopes it doesn't stick.

Chivas is the son of Robert and Renee DeVinck of Carmel. He was born at Community Hospital on Feb. 19 at 2:56 p.m., weighed 7 pounds, 12 ounces and was 21 inches long. He has gray-blue eyes and a mass of jet black hair.

Also welcoming Chivas to the family is his sister, three-year-old Genevieve, who thinks Chivas is her own special little doll. The baby's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter DeVinck of Carmel and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Engdol of Saratoga.

The proud father is a waiter at Gregory's Old Stonehouse and Chivas' mother says she is a professional mom. "He's a great baby," said Mrs. DeVinck. "He's as good as his sister was and I just can't believe that anyone could be lucky enough to have two good babies."

Dad doesn't get stuck with the late hour chores because that's when he works but he does do his share of parental duties during the day, including getting both children dressed in the morning. Because he's home most of the day, he spends a lot of time with his family.

Welcome to the work world, Chivas.

Petpourri

Be prepared to care for pet's problems

By JUDITH A. EISNER

IF IT'S TRUE that children can't pick their parents, its especially true that dogs and cats can't pick their owners except in rare instances.

One of the saddest things to us is the situation where family pets must be given up. There are all sorts of reasons that make it necessary to find new homes for pets. A family relocation to another state or even another country often makes it impossible to take pets along (although many people find a way to do so). Children may develop allergies that make contact with fur-bearing animals impossible, and sometimes, people just have "had enough" and don't want the animal any more.

The last situation is the most unfortunate for the animals, because frequently they have not been cared for properly for some time before the ultimate decision to get rid of them was reached.

Most animals who have been raised with a family from earliest awareness are totally dependent on that family—or on humans in general—to care for them. Even the "independent" cat, who may be an accomplished hunter, still expects a full dinner plate and a warm spot on the couch at night. Very few animals, no matter how neglected they may be, elect to pick up and find a new home. They just aren't made that way.

So the indoor dog or cat whose family is tired of him, or who don't know how to handle, restrain or train him, may find himself shunted out of doors, tied to a tree or a doghouse or crouched on the doormat begging to be let back in. That they mutely accept such treatment doesn't mean they like it. But to accept is the lot of the average pet.

When a family decides it no longer wants or is no longer able to keep a pet, the reason is usually insufficient education in the first place.

JUST THE OTHER DAY, we overheard a woman talking about giving up her cats. We asked what the problem was, and she explained that she had moved to a new house and one or both of the cats was "soaking the rug."

She loved the cats and thought they were wonderful. But she had never had a cat before, and did not know that sexually mature male cats frequently announce their presence by "spraying," or discharging urine in, on, around or under anything convenient. All she did know is that this was ruining the rug and smelling up the living room.

Had she been warned that this might happen when she first got the kitten, and had she been told how to remedy the situation, she would not have been looking for a new home for the cats.

As it is, the male cat is due to be neutered this week. Neutering, if done when the cat is not too old and experienced a professional tom-cat, usually stops spraying (as well as fighting and indiscriminate breeding) very quickly. We assured her it would not alter the cat's loving disposition, and she is both delighted and relieved not to have to give up her pets.

People take in dogs and cats because they think they will be able to manage very well. They don't realize that even the healthiest animal will require a minimum expenditure each year on routine inoculations and licensing. Any illness or accident is likely to incur additional vet bills, and some people either can't or won't pay for treating an animal.

Additionally, most people aren't prepared to cope with the problems that sexual maturity may bring to their pet. Cats, unless spayed or neutered, will fight, yowl and produce endless litters of kittens. Males may spray and, if they fight, are bound to develop abscesses from other cat bites that require expensive and protracted veterinary treatment.

Female dogs require eternal vigilance and secure quarters while they are in heat, twice a year, plus measures to discourage the male dog pack from congregating about the house or car.

Dogs and cats need sound diets, and week after week, month after month, high quality pet foods add up to a not inconsiderable sum at the grocery store.

If you are having trouble with a pet, don't simply decide to get rid of it. Seek professional or expert advice. Sometimes the solution is very simple.

THE PROBLEMS that may arise in pet ownership are as many and varied as the pets themselves. By being prepared in advance for what can and what surely will happen, much heartbreak could be avoided.

If, after all things have been considered, the decision is reached to give up a pet, it is the owner's responsibility to find that pet a good home. Waiting until the week of a long-planned move, or waiting until a cat is almost due to kitten is not fair. To give the animal an even chance at getting a good home, you must plan in advance and do your utmost to find a place for him.

If you must give up a pet, the logical step is to advertise in local newspapers. Contact local veterinarians and ask if they might have inquiries for such an animal. Post notices on bulletin boards around the community. Get your children to tell their friends and to tack up a notice at school. Contact other dog or cat owners who might know of someone or take the animal themselves.

Don't expect the S.P.C.A. to guarantee that they can place your pet. They are deluged with animals and, although they try mightily, animal overpopulation has overburdened them terribly. Fewer than one out of ten puppies or kittens brought to them is adopted.

The burden and responsibility is yours. And waiting 'til the last minute is not trying hard enough.

Works by Carmel artist will go on exhibit at church

Carmel artist and retired businessman Nat Shevitz will present his second show of paintings Sunday, March 28 at noon at the Church of Religious Science, Franklin and Pacific Streets, Monterey. The public is invited to the show and reception.

Shevitz, who began painting at age 50, is now 65. Two years ago he displayed 50 oil paintings at his first show at the Pacific Grove Art Center. The show was well-received by critics.

"When I started painting at the age of 50, I felt I did not have enough time for art course so I decided to learn how to paint on my own. I bought books on perspective, books on anatomy and looked at the Impressionist paintings at the Chicago Art Institute and Jackson Pollock's work at the New York Museum of Modern Art," he said. Shevitz admits: "I've been influenced by contemporary masters and admire much of the work of Josef Albers, Mark Tobey and Jackson Pollock."

"I teach myself by looking at the work of other people who do a professional job. I have always learned this way."

Educated at Syracuse University, Shevitz left college and entered retail business and was active for many years on the Monterey Peninsula. While convalescing from surgery, he found time to develop his old interest in painting.

Father Farrell's wisdom

The road to good intentions

Invocation to the Carmel
Rotary Club, March 10, 1982

Gilbert Kerth Chesterton is a favorite of mine, a brilliant English writer, wit, philosopher and Christian apologist. He had a monumental brain but in practical matters, he had the short memory of the proverbial absent-minded professor. One morning, he left his home in Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire, to give an evening lecture. At noon, he wired his wife, "I am at Bishop's Stortford in Hertfordshire. Where am I supposed to be?" She wired back, "home." Then she told her housekeeper that it would be easier to get him home from Bishop's Stortford, then it would be to get him from there to where he was supposed to be.

If Chesterton was alive today, he no doubt would tell us that as good men and as Rotarians, we need to come home to have moral principles and then set out in a better direction.

In many of our goals this would be easier than attempting to get from where we are to where we ought to go.

In the early days of California, there was a well marked road — El Camino Real — the King's Highway. Keep us, Oh Lord, on that Royal Road marked so well by the principles of Rotary service to others above self.

When I wrote this prayer, it seemed to make sense, but now I wonder. So Lord, please give it the meaning I intended, for we do know what road is paved with good intentions. Amen.

Major race-walk March 28 in Carmel Valley

By MICHAEL GARDNER

GARY WEST of Carmel had never given much thought to the obscure sport of race-walking — he had been a jogger for about 20 years — when one sunny Saturday about a year ago he literally ran into a YMCA race-walk class. He has been hooked since.

West will compete in the master's division (age 40 and over) of the first major race-walk event in the Carmel area, at the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club Sunday, March 28 at 10 a.m.

Organizer Giulio de Petra of Carmel, a former Olympic race-walker, said the original course in downtown Carmel had to be changed because it was too hilly.

DePetra said the 25-kilometer race will begin in front of the tennis courts and circle along Valley Greens Drive. Admission to the race is free and spectators are welcome.

About 25 race-walkers will compete, including Swedish star J. Nielsen and Jim Hiering of Wisconsin, who broke the six-minute mile barrier in a New York meet this year.

Three age groups will compete: masters, seniors and juniors. A medal will be awarded for the first three finishers in each division. The race will not have a purse because it is open only to amateurs, de Petra said.

"It's a 100 percent amateur sport. People come at their own expense," he said. "The race does have some importance at this time because of the qualifying for the Olympics. You will see the best American athletes and some of them will be in the Olympics in Los Angeles."

West, who is 41, said he does not have Olympic aspirations, but does look forward to competition with world-class athletes.

"There's going to be some national, and perhaps international, race-walkers. Some of the people will be in the Olympics," West said. "I'm looking forward to walking with people with really international class. It's important for me to really observe their styles at high speeds."

JUST A YEAR AGO, West was in his 20th year of jogging and hadn't really given much thought to race-walking.

"I saw Giulio de Petra teaching a YMCA class one Saturday when I was out jogging," West said. "I became interested and tried it. I found it fascinating. I think it's a very difficult technique to learn."

The two soon became friends and de Petra has been acting as coach for West.

Since the announcement of the March 28 race, West has increased his training to six days a week, race-walking about two hours a day.

The main emphasis on his training has been technique.

"Technique is very important. You can be thrown out of the race at any time if the rules are violated," West said.

West said he encourages spectators to come out for the race. "If you really want to see some good race-walking, it will be there," he said.

For more information, contact de Petra at 624-7211 or 373-2160.

Carmel students to compete for achievement awards

Three Carmel High School students will compete in the Bank of America 1982 Achievement Awards program March 31 at the Hyatt Del Monte.

A panel of six community leaders will judge the students on the basis of written compositions and a roundtable discussion on the subjects' fields of study.

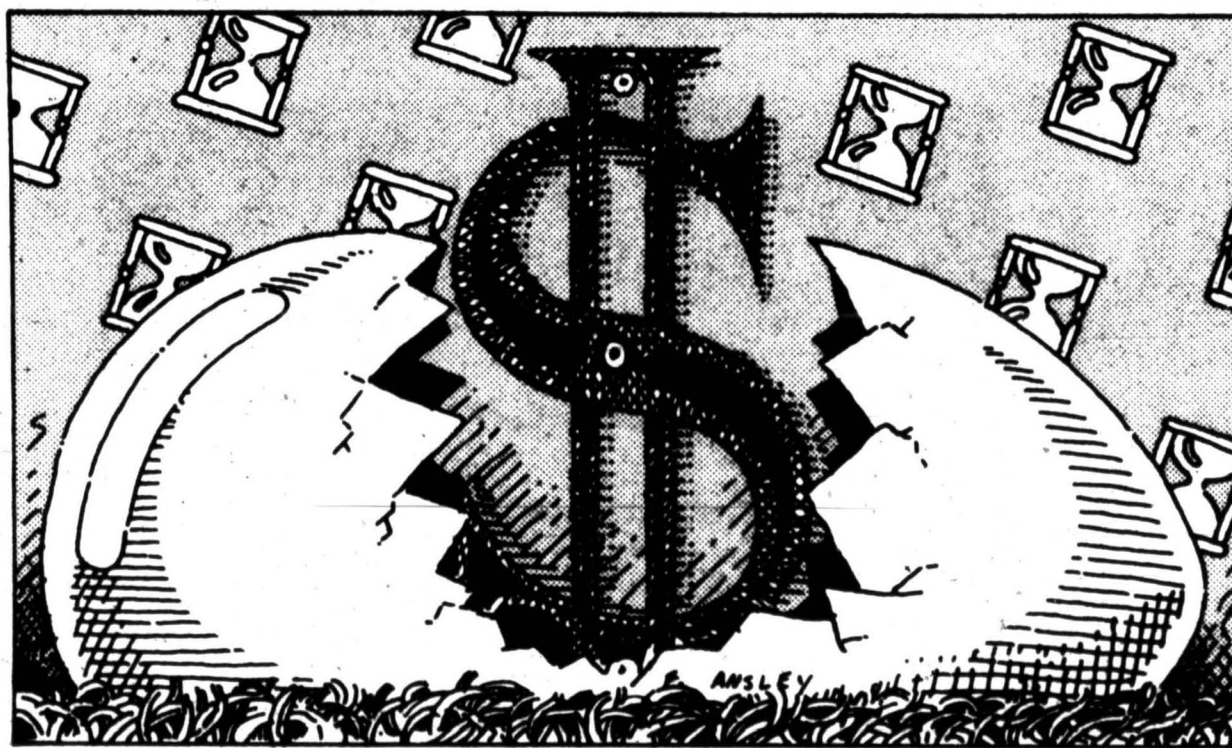

The participants' scholastic record and extra-curricular activities will also be considered in the judging.

Go fly a kite at Carmel festival

Kids and kites are surefire heralds of spring. With the green hills a backdrop and the blue sky a canopy, original homemade kites will soar over the Carmel Middle School athletic field when the 53rd annual Carmel Kite Festival takes flight Saturday, March 27 at 1 p.m.

Founded in 1930 by the Rev. Willis White, the festival has been sponsored by the Carmel Unified School District recreation department in recent years. A trophy bearing White's name is awarded to the kite with the best design.

Other special trophies include the Ernest Calley Perpetual Plaque for the grand champion kite and the Charles L. Dawson Trophy for the youngster under 12 years of age who constructs the outstanding kite without adult help.

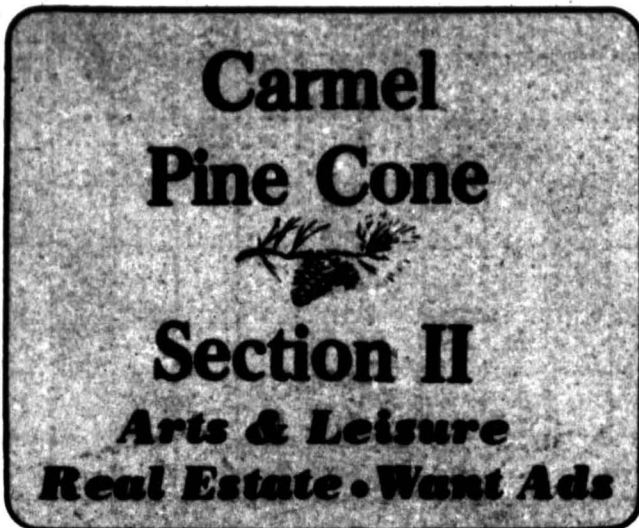

Contestants may enter in six age categories from eight years up to 65 years and older. There is no registration fee and anyone may enter.

The catch is that kites must be made by the contestant himself and must actually fly in order to be eligible for awards. Commercial kites will be ineligible for registration and passenger-carrying kites will not be accepted.

Other prize categories include highest flying, best-made and prettiest kites with prizes given in each age group.

Registration begins at 1 p.m. with the first launchings at the same hour. In the event of rain, the festival will be moved up one week to Saturday, April 3.

Carmel Middle School is approximately one mile east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. For further information, phone the school district recreation office, 624-1547.

THE GLORIOUS STRAINS of Handel's Messiah will fill Carmel Mission Basilica when the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, accompanied by the Monterey County

Chamber Orchestra, performs the great oratorio Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, March 26-28.

IF IT FLIES and if you made it yourself, any kite is eligible to compete in the 53rd annual Carmel Kite Festival on the Carmel Middle School athletic field Saturday, March 27.

Prizes and perpetual trophies will be awarded in six age categories. The festival is open to kite-flyers of all ages.

Handel's 'Messiah' to be performed at Carmel Mission this weekend

Tickets are still available for the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society performances of Handel's Messiah at Carmel Mission Basilica, Friday and Sunday March 26 and 28. The Saturday, March 27 performance is sold out.

Soloists Helen Dilworth, soprano, Marcia Hunt, contralto, Gregory Waity, tenor and William Ramsey, bass will join the Chorus and Monterey County Symphony Chamber Orchestra under the baton of Music Director Haymo Taeuber.

Of all oratorios written, Handel's Messiah is perhaps the favorite and best-known. The final Amen leaves one with the conviction that this work was divinely inspired. Begun on Aug. 22, 1741, the mighty score was finished in 21 days — a monumental feat. Selections of Biblical text are masterfully arranged to tell the complete story of the life of Jesus, his death and Resurrection, the spreading of the Gospel and the hope of mankind.

Tickets are $6.50. No tickets are available at outlets or at Carmel Mission on concert nights. There are no reserved seats. For reservations phone 394-6351.

Steeplechasers will challenge Bird Rock Course

The spectacular oceanside Bird Rock Hunt Course at Pebble Beach will be the site of the 24th annual Los Altos Hunt Race Meet on Saturday, March 27.

Horses and riders from several West Coast fox hunts will use the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center as home base for the event. Members of recognized hunts add glamor and color to the race meet by virtue of their "pink" (actually scarlet) coats; other riders wear black jackets with beige breeches and black boots.

The race meet is also the occasion for a gala al fresco luncheon served in a special enclosure near the Bird Rock finish line. Proceeds benefit the United States Equestrian Team. Cost of the luncheon is $35. Reservations may be made through Mrs. Chris Bock, 624-0207.

A popular attraction added last year will be continued. A dog show for Jack Russell terriers will be staged between the races. Patrick Ellis, Huntsman with the Los Altos Hunt, will judge classes for puppies, hunnable bitches and hunnable dogs.

Races on the day's card include the Hill Topper and Del Monte Forest Point to Point. A new rule this year insists that horses and riders maintain a proper hunting pace. Abby Foss, director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, will lead the riders and ensure that correct pace.

The Bird Rock Ladies Steeplechase will precede the final race of the day, and the most difficult, the Spyglass Hill Steeplechase. Winner will receive a replica of the Del Monte Gold Cup; the original cup is

Film review:'Missing' hits the mark

By LISA JENSEN

Missing is a tense political melodrama set in a Latin American country after a bloody military coup. The theme of covert U.S. involvement is personalized when a conservative American businessman travels to the war-torn country in search of his journalist son, who disappeared shortly after the coup.

The story is based on the case of Charles Horman, who disappeared in Chile after the military junta of 1973. (Although the film never mentions the country by name, implying how common this kind of political chaos has become throughout Latin America.) Charles (John Shea) is portrayed as a fun-loving but idealistic young American who lives in the capitol with wife Beth (Sissy Spacek), dabbles in animated films and translates articles for a liberal newspaper published by some American friends.

The violence of the coup is so terrifying that the Hormans plan to leave the country. But before they can, Charles disappears. Beth is told he was led away by government troops. After two weeks without news, she's joined by Charles' straight-faced father, Ed (Jack Lemmon), who's frustrated by his fruitless efforts to enlist the help of the U.S. government.

Ed clings to his faith in the benevolent wisdom of U.S. policies at home and abroad, and rejects his daughter-in-law's hostile cynicism, until that faith is challenged by red tape, platitudes and no action from the American ambassador and consulate. Worse still, he and Beth uncover evidence that Charles' arrest (and possible execution) may, in fact, have been sanctioned by the U.S. government.

The sentiments of director/co-writer Costa Gavras (famous for incendiary political thrillers like Z and State of Siege) are clear; we're encouraged to root for plucky Spacek and earnest but vulnerable Lemmon against the array of amoral U.S. officials who oppose them. But the film doesn't presume to accuse outright the U.S. government of complicity in Horman's death. Instead, Costa-Gavras wisely lays out all the evidence (much of it inconclusive or circumstantial) and allows the audience to draw its own conclusions.

In fact, one of the film's major accomplishments is showing how difficult it is to know the truth of any situation, especially one fraught with emotional and political consequences. The relativity of "truth" pops up in the conflicting eyewitness reports of Charles' arrest, Ed's own inaccurate perception of his son as a lazy anarchist and the diversionary non-information devised by the U.S. officials. Ironically, even the prologue statement that "every fact, every incident is true" is open to as many interpretations as there are witnesses to provide the clues.

Missing makes its strongest impact in its chilling portrait of daily life under military repression. Tanks and helicopters patrol throughout, random shots ring out and unidentified corpses clog the gutters, or pile up like sides of beef in the city morgue.

Missing argues that any degree of complicity in this kind of repression is inexcusable. At a time when Ronald Reagan is cheerfully shipping off 55 million of your tax dollars in military aid to El Salvador, this film urges us to be on guard against international violence and horror committed in the name of the American people.

What's playing at the movies

All That Jazz: Bob Fosse's autobiographical musical about a great, worn-out, self-destructive, loveable, genius choreographer-director (Roy Scheider) who has a backstage rendezvous with Death (Jessica Lange). With Cliff Gorman, Ann Reinking, Leland Palmer, Ben Vereen and a lot of lively dancers. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema.

The Amateur: A suspense-packed espionage thriller. The amateur Charles Heller, played by John Savage, takes matters into his own hands and pursues the terrorists who brutally murdered his girl friend. Heller's pursuit leads him behind the Iron Curtain to a confrontation with the head of Czech intelligence played by Christopher Plummer. Marthe Keller has the sensitive role of a CIA operative in Prague who has little affection for her American employers. The movie is based on Robert Littell's best selling novel. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

A Stranger Is Watching: A suspense-thriller about a psychopath who holds a TV newswoman and a young girl hostage below Grand Central Station. With Rip Torn, Kate Mulgrew and James Naughton. Rated R. At the State Three Cinema.

Cannery Row: Filmed on the Monterey Peninsula, this film recreates the boisterous Monterey waterfront of the 1940s, a haven for derelicts, dreamers and nonconformists who triumph over harsh realities with their compassion and good humor intact. A touching love affair between Doc (Nick Nolte), an enigmatic and eccentric marine biologist and Suzy (Debra Winger), a pretty young drifter determined to survive, begins. Audra Lindley stars as the shrewd, earthy madame. Narrated by John Huston. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

Charlots of Fire: A wealthy Jewish boy becomes a star runner and a Scots missionary sprints for the glory of God. The two men, driven in different ways, lead England to gold medals and glory in the 1924 Olympics in Paris. Beautifully blended color photography. Starring Ben Cross, Ian Charleson, and Alice Krige. Rated PG. At the Golden Bough.

Death Wish II: A man played by Charles Bronson, whose family has been viciously assaulted and murdered, devotes his life to vengeance. Jill Ireland and Vincent Gardenia also star. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Evil Under the Sun: An Agatha Christie thriller about a famous detective, Hercule Poirot, played by Peter Ustinov, who while vacationing in Greece realizes that crime does not take a holiday. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

Force Five: Exciting techniques of the martial art of Kung Fu are displayed. Starring Joe Louis. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

French Lieutenant's Woman: Based on John Fowles' ambiguous novel of passion and romance in 19th century England. This movie stars Meryl Streep and Jeremy Irons playing two different pairs of lovers in different centuries. As the Victorian lovers, they are urgent and romantic; as two actors playing the Victorians, they are shallow and insincere. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

I Ought To Be In Pictures: Film adopted from the Broadway play by Neil Simon, and directed by Herbert Ross. A well-constructed tearjerker and heartwarming comedy set in West Hollywood about the reunion of a father and daughter after 16 years. Diana Manoff plays the daughter, Walter Matthau, the father, and Ann Margret his girl friend. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Life of Brian: Monty Python goes to Palestine, and the Holy Land is stung with irreverent humor. Brian of Nazareth, mistaken early in life for Christ, joins a Judean underground splinter-group and is hailed as the Messiah. Very funny. At the Dream Theater.

McVicar: A slum-turned-hardened criminal John McVicar, played by Roger Daltrey, once known as the "most dangerous man in Britain." The real McVicar (who finally abandoned crime to educate himself and become a scholar and writer on the criminal mind), co-wrote the script, which

Melvin and Howard: A reconstruction of what might have happened if Melvin Dummar, the man named in the famous "Mormon will" as Howard Hughes' main beneficiary, was actually telling the truth. Melvin, played by Paul Le Mat, the old millionaire Hughes is played by Jason Robards, with Mary Steenburgen in an Oscar-winning performance as Melvin's first wife. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

Missing: A suspense thriller based on a true story. A distraught father (Jack Lemmon) searches for his son, played by Charles Horman, who disappeared following the military coup that overthrew the Allende government in Chile in 1973. Lemmon is superb as the establishment-minded father. Sissy Spacek plays his daughter-in-law. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

Montenegro: A whimsical erotic comedy about a pampered American lady (Susan Anspach) going crazy from too much money and not enough sex, who leaves her stolid Swedish-businessman-husband played by Erland Josephson. She finds fulfillment among the coarse Yugoslavian emigres who live and work in sexy squalor in a Stockholm distillery. Filmed in English in Sweden. At the Dream Theater.

On Golden Pond: Katharine Hepburn and Henry Fonda offer a story of a couple still passionately in love after 48 years. Jane Fonda plays their daughter. Rated PG. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Porky's: A ribald comedy of adolescence in the '50's directed by Bob Clark. The title is derived from the name of a notorious redneck dive to which six teenagers are hypnotically drawn in the belief that they can purchase carnal experience on its premises. A youthful comedy which is a showcase for the six talented actors. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Quest For Fire: If you loved Chewbacca, you'll go ape over Naoh, Gau and Ika in this film. A story about early man and our beginning. Many strange beasts of prehistoric times such as vicious saber-toothed tigers and Indian elephants. There are some scenes to make you laugh, whether intentional or not. Rated PG. At the Cinema 70.

Ragtime: The E.L. Doctorow novel about three remarkable families in America at the turn of the century. Stars James Cagney, Debbie Allen, Brad Dourif, Moses Gunn, Norman Mailer and Bessie Love. Directed by Milos Forman. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip: Pryor is the writer and star of this film, which was shot live at the Hollywood Palladium on two consecutive evenings. With a mixture of wit and warmth, he takes his audience through hilarious accounts of his life, and finally, "Pryor on fire," a re-telling of what led to the accident which nearly cost him his life. Rated R. At the Regency.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A movie about two teenagers and a transvestite from another planet. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theater.

The Sound of Music: The beautiful musical of the von Trapp family in Austria. The sweeping scenery and music delight audiences again and again. Julie Andrews stars. Rated G. At the Dream Theater.

BOTH LANDED AT SAME SPOT

The two parties which made Monterey Bay known and later made Monterey exist both came ashore on the same part of the beach, just south of the Presidio of Monterey on Pacific St., in present-day Monterey. They were groups led by Sebastian Vizcaino in 1602 and Fr. Junipero Serra in 1770. A monument marks the location.

BackgammonAn unlikely position

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You are White, on roll in this unlikely position. Should you double? If you do, should Black accept?

You should double although you are only slightly ahead in the race. (If each player uses each roll without waste, you need a total of 85 points on the dice; Black needs 90 points.) But when both of you begin to bear off, you should have your men far better distributed and should therefore need fewer rolls to bear all of your men off.

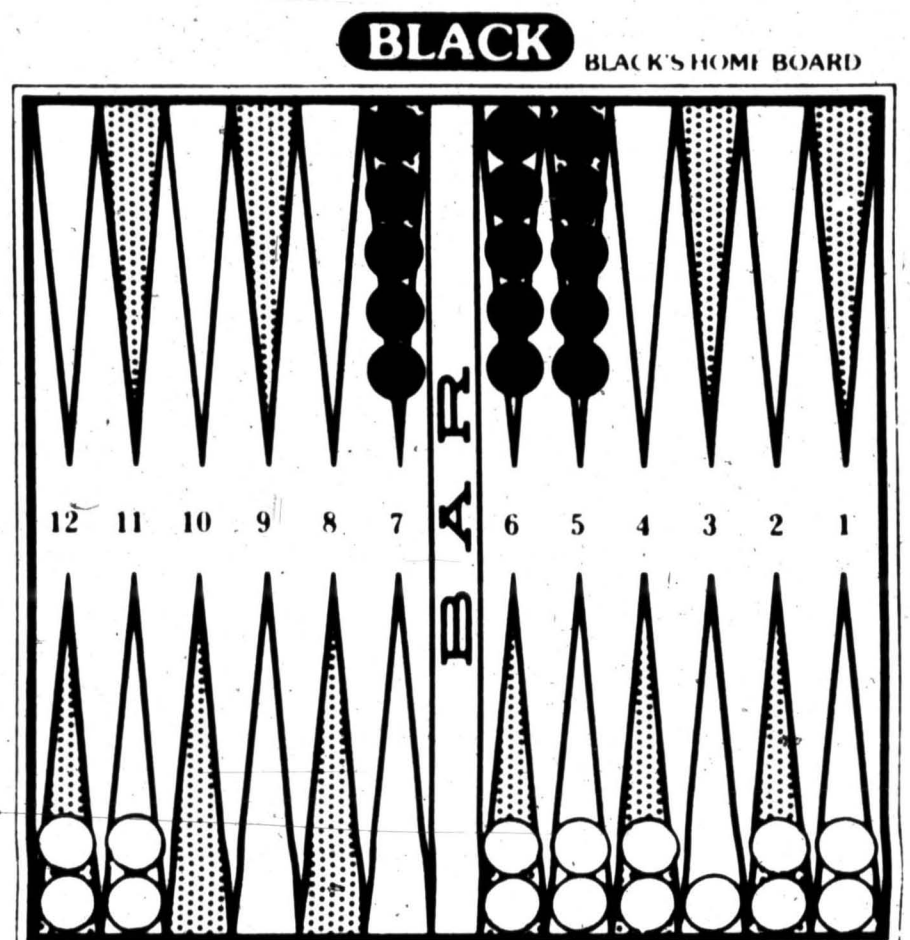

Black should accept the double because he is in no danger of being gammoned, can make especially good use of doublets and may even win if he can roll an unusually large number of sixes and fives.

You don't have a good redouble in this position. If you get two or three poor rolls and Black gets two or three big numbers, you will find the doubling cube back on your side of the board. Wait for a few rolls to see if your advantage grows or shrinks.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053 p.m. at the Kelley Gallery near the Doubletree Mall, Monterey. Victor Pinheiro recreates Ben Franklin, Judy Mueller plays his ladies from Colonial America and the courts of France.

Ben Franklin and his ladies on stage at Kelley Gallery

Ben Franklin will be in Monterey this weekend to talk about his public and private relationships with the many ladies in his life.

In a one-hour show, Franklin and the Ladies of Two Worlds, Dr. Franklin will electrocute himself into a state of unconsciousness and, during an imaginary dream sequence, meet the various women in his life, from Colonial America to the courts of France.

The verbal sparring and wit are taken directly from Franklin's writings and correspondence and are put together in a form which not only says much about this great man, but about the relationship as a whole between all men and women.

This two-person presentation by the American Living History Theater stars Victor Pinheiro as Dr. Benjamin Franklin and Judy Mueller as The Ladies. The play is being sponsored by the Colonial Monterey Foundation.

Franklin and the Ladies of Two Worlds will be performed Saturday and Sunday afternoon, March 27 and 28, at 2:30 p.m. in the Kelley Gallery, on the mall next to the Doubletree Inn, Monterey.

Admission is $3.50. Members of Colonial Monterey will be admitted free.

Reception planned March 27

Zantman Galleries to open Krumeich exhibit

"My work has been called 'the latest thing in 19th century painting.' I like that," says Thaddeus Krumeich, whose unusual "paintings in boxes" will be honored with a one-man show at Zantman Art Galleries. An opening reception, to which the public is invited, is planned Saturday, March 27 from 5-8 p.m.

If Krumeich's trompe l'oeil paintings look familiar, it is probably because they have been featured in Time/Life, Good Housekeeping, Reader's Digest and on the covers of Collector's Quarterly, The Plate Collector and Cats Magazine. Five of his designs were chosen by UNICEF to be reproduced on their internationally-distributed greeting cards.

Krumeich achieves his startling three-dimensional quality by actually constructing a five-sided box which he paints to resemble a window, cupboard or curio case. To that end, gallery brochures of his work often give three dimensions: for height, width and depth. Frames are unnecessary for his work, since he paints "around the bend."

Cats are a favorite subject, captured with the stylization and sparkle of primitive art, yet suffused with sophistication. Krumeich's cats pose primly in the windows or cupboards, staring right at you or peeking out from behind unlikely hideouts — watermelon slices, floral bouquets or collections of Americana in wooden cases into which the cats fit quite perfectly!

Felines have become a Krumeich trademark

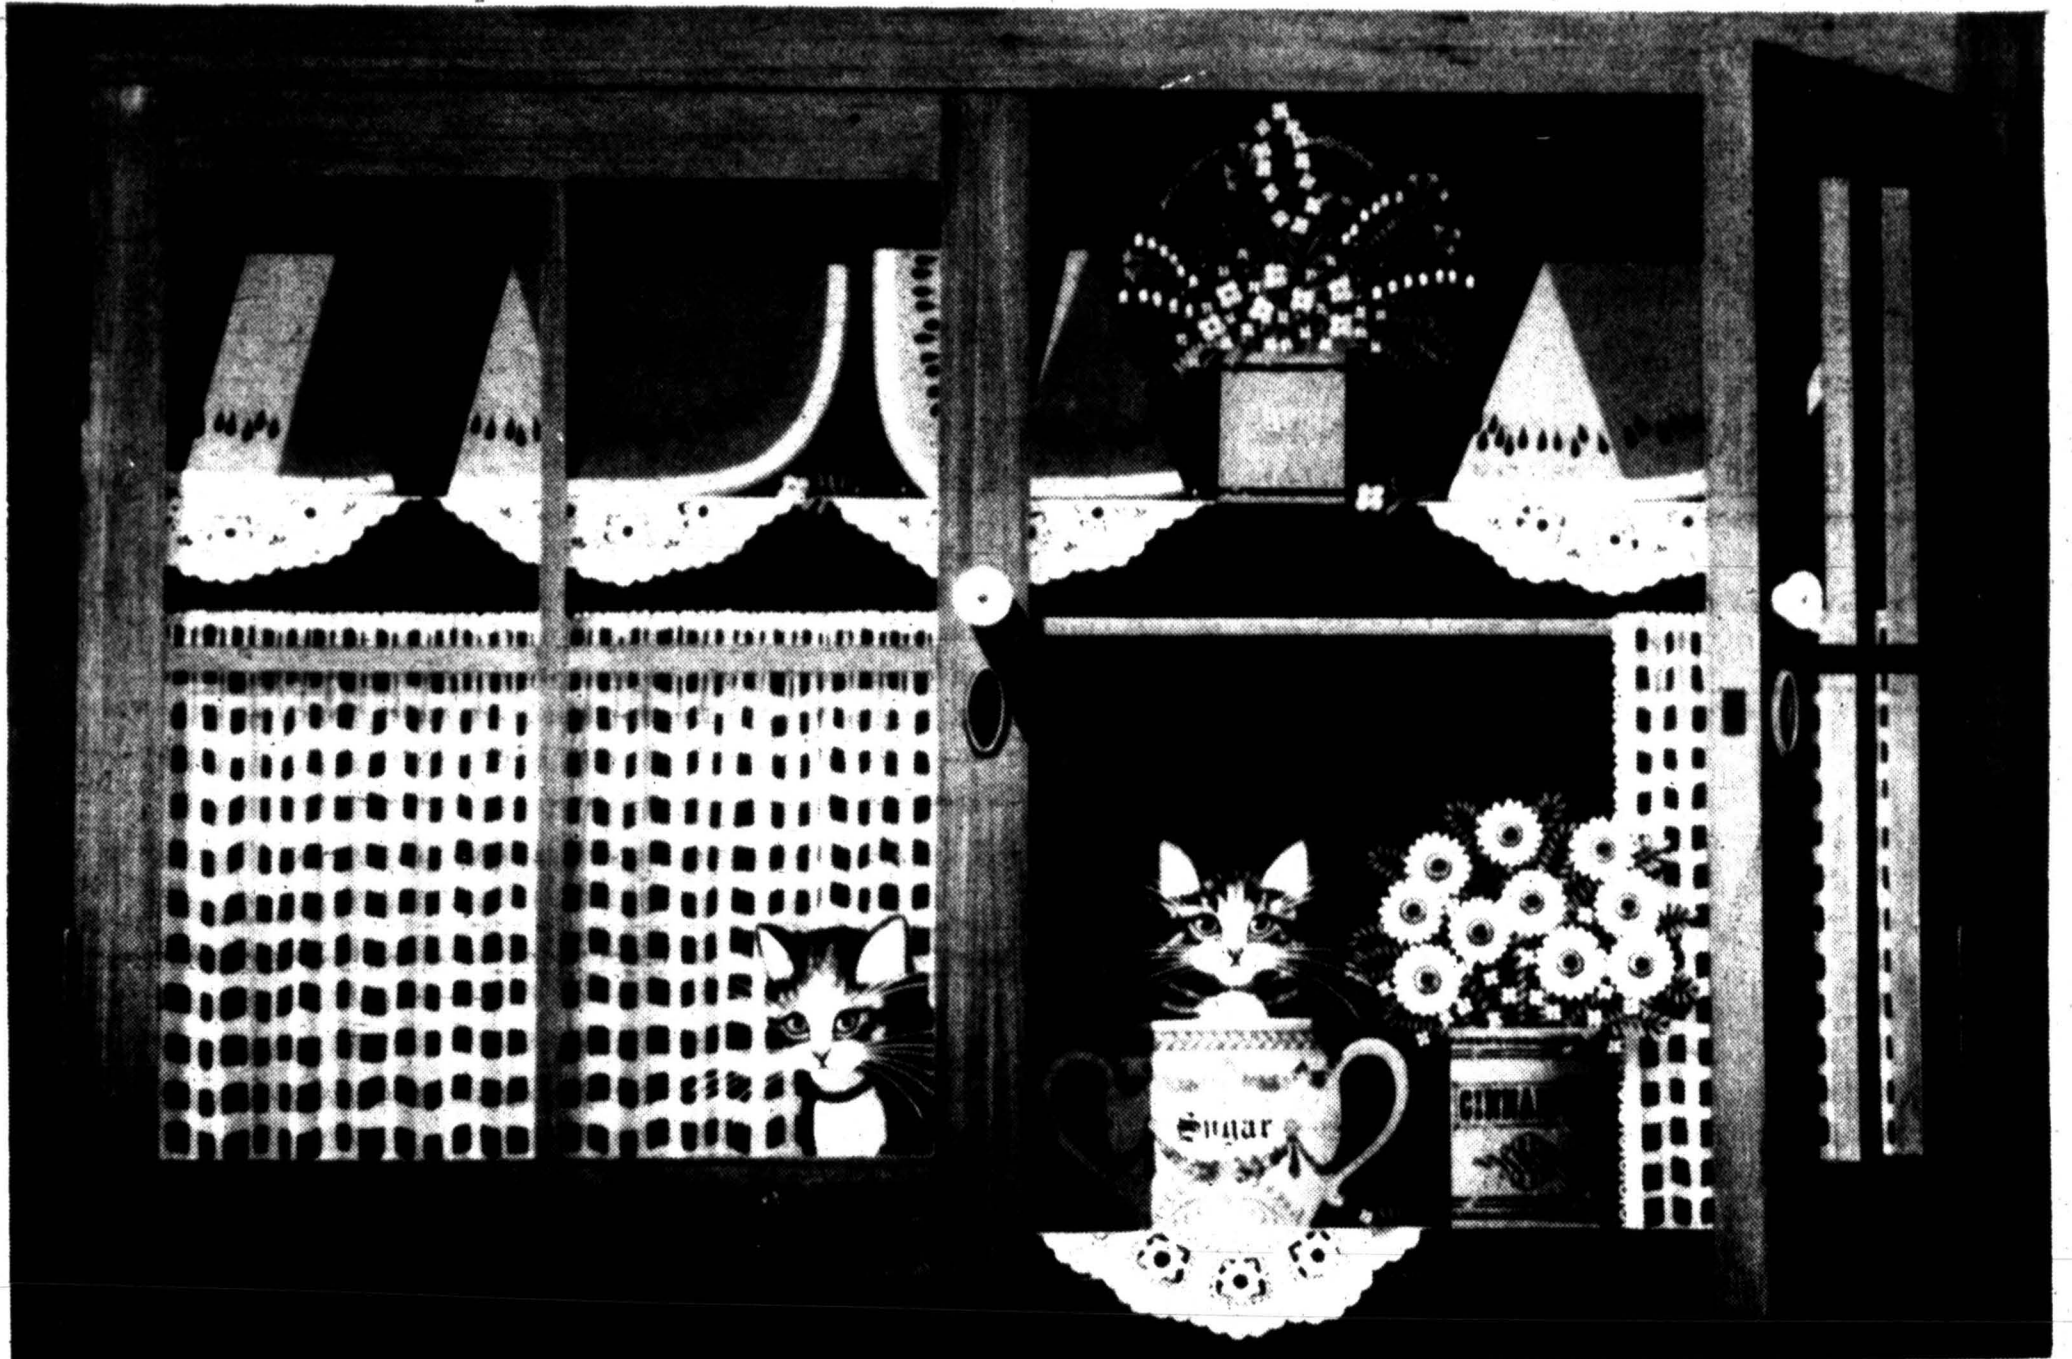

Felines have become a Krumeich trademark of sorts. He is currently designing a series of limited-edition collector's plates, Uncle Tad's Cats, to be produced by the Anna-Perenna porcelain company. The fourth of this series, Oliver's Birthday, will be available at Zantman Galleries during his exhibit. A lithograph featuring his cats will also be available.

The artist lives in Southampton, Long Island. His paintings have been exhibited at the Bodley Gallery and Caravan House in New York and at the Bruce Museum in Greenwich, Conn.

Zantman Art Galleries is on Sixth and Mission, Carmel. For further information, phone 624-8314.

SUGAR AND SPICE (and a watermelon slice!) is the title artist Thaddeus Krumeich gives to this delightful primitive painting, constructed in a wooden cabinet. His unusual paintings, all in three-dimensional wooden cabinets, cupboards and clock cases, will be honored with a one-man show at Zantman

Art Galleries. Opening night reception is Saturday, March 27 from 5-8 p.m. The public is welcome.

Our New Location in Carmel!

Dear Friends and Valued Customers:

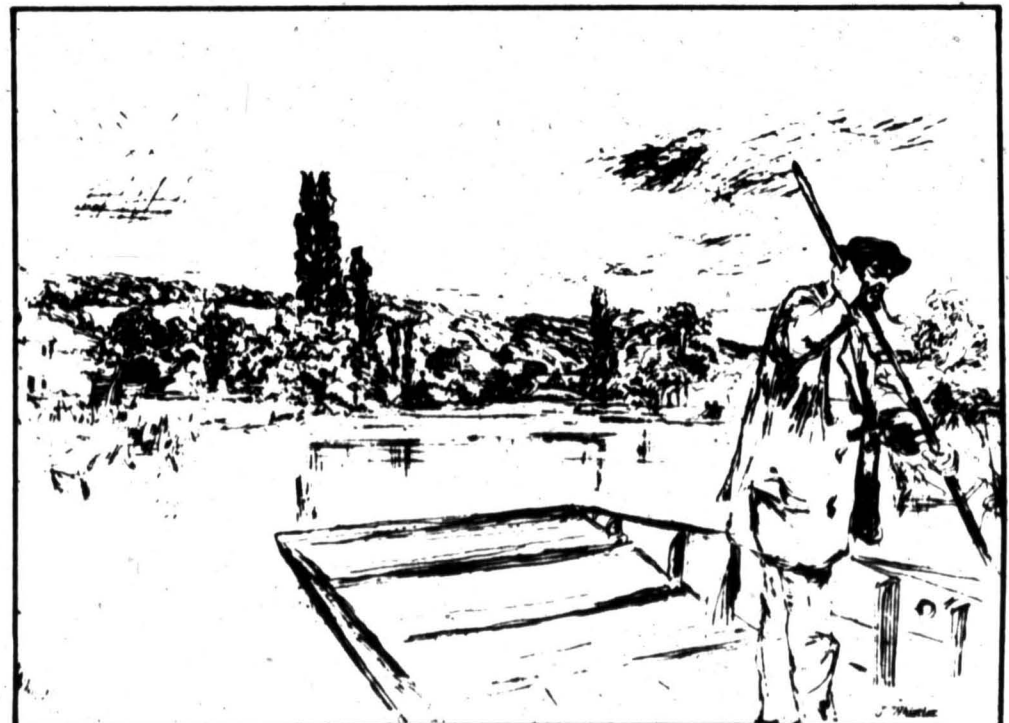

We are moving! As of April 1, 1982 — and possibly even sooner — we will be in our new location in Carmel: on 7th Avenue, between San Carlos and Dolores — up some stairs, in the diminutive, charming and out-of-the-way "Court of Enchanted Oaks."

If you know Nielsen Brothers' super non-Supermarket at 7th and San Carlos, we will be just a short half-block West. Look carefully for the signs — we are not allowed very big ones in Carmel.

We are very happy about this move. We will be going into much smaller quarters (more intimate, shall we say?) — but this means only that the quality of our selections will be that much higher. We will still feature the best we can find in antique porcelains, as well as other antiques and art of rarity and beauty, and, not regretfully, of less than colossal size. And our appraisal office will be here too.

This move coincides with our 10th Anniversary — in a business we enjoy more and more with each passing year. We intend to continue in this most wonderful way of life as long as we are physically able — and probably even longer. But in the nearer future, we look forward to greeting you — up those stairs.

Most sincerely,
William & Grace Davis

Stevenson School to stage classic musical 'Oklahoma!'

Oklahoma!, Rodgers and Hammerstein's timeless musical, will open at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 25 in the Keck Auditorium at Robert Louis Stevenson School. The Stevenson Players will stage the production.

Oklahoma! tells the simple love story of Curly, a cowboy, who valiantly wants to capture the heart of a farm girl named Laurie. The villain, Jud, is the only man who stands in his way. This play is one of the greatest family entertainments of all time.

The musical features the memorable songs Oh, What a Beautiful Morning, The Surrey with the Fringe on Top, People Will Say We're in Love, and, of course, Oklahoma!

The Stevenson Players have repeatedly delighted audiences on the Monterey Peninsula and abroad with fine theatrical productions. The Players' repertoire includes Fiddler on the Roof, Taming of the Shrew, Death of a Salesman, and last year's sold-out run of Grease.

The cast of Oklahoma! includes Ian Neumann as Curly and Kim Taylor as his belle, Laurie. The play is directed by Hamish Tyler and choreographed by Suzanne Russon.

Oklahoma! will also be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 26 and 27, and at 2 p.m. on Sunday, March 28. The Keck Auditorium is located on campus, Forest Lake Road, Pebble Beach.

Tickets are $5. For reservations and information, phone 624-1257, ext. 68.

OKLAHOMA! comes alive again when the Robert Louis Stevenson School Players stage the beloved Rodgers and Hammerstein musical Thursday through Sunday, March 25-28 at Keck Auditorium on the school campus, Forest Lake Road, Pebble Beach. Bring the entire family!

Grants do not come from heaven

By RICHARD TYLER

GRANTS, UNLIKE MANNA, do not come from heaven. Grants are the result of continuous hard work, a process which is called "fund raising." Since this is the budget season, I thought that I would write a little about the prerequisites needed for effective fund-raising.

There are almost one million non-profit organizations registered with the I.R.S. and all need money. Nearly everyone dreams of those corporate, foundation and federal gifts which will solve all of their problems, but good fund-raisers cannot be dreamers. To be a successful fund-raiser, you must raise money from people who know and appreciate the work and potential of your organization.

Many non-profit cultural groups do not have a clear, easily understood statement of purpose. They have to define their reason for being or their target audience. As a result, individual staff and board members may try to take the organization in different and perhaps conflicting directions.

We spend our lives trying to convince the rest of the world how important the arts and our efforts are to the health and well-being of our community. There is one sure test of how important they are. If you closed up shop tomorrow, would people notice? Not just people directly involved, but what would the impact be on the community as a whole? Think in terms of specific social, economic, educational and community services your organization can provide the area you serve.

Many arts organizations have powerful and supportive volunteers who know very little about the arts but who work effectively for the group because they feel it will help the community. Many leaders may not care about or understand dance, drama, ceramics or music, but they do care about the recreational and educational needs of the residents, the attractiveness of the community to future homeowners and the image the city presents in cultural efforts.

ONE OF THE GREATEST fund-raising problems faced by cultural groups is that they operate in a vacuum. They want to ask the rest of the world for money but not for input as to what the organizations should be doing. The process of raising money begins when you involve people in the planning process for programs and long-term organizational development and make them feel they have helped shape the organization's future.

A board — not the staff — is usually responsible for fund-raising. Make certain that those who accept positions on the board realize this. Your fund-raising will be much closer to success when there is a strong board of directors that realizes it is responsible for funding the programs it has approved.

One of the best ways of refreshing a board's commitment is a periodic review of the organization's long-range plans. If the members commit themselves and the organization to follow a certain plan of action, then they will have to help develop the resources to implement the plan.

You must sit down with donors and make them feel comfortable with the organization. They have to know its strengths and weaknesses, its victories and failures. The more a prospective donor is involved with an organization and the more a donor knows, the better the gift potential. If you have a membership, make sure they are informed. If you have subscribers, make sure they know you are subsidizing their attendance. An informed donor is the best donor.

Some organizations suffer from what may be called "Grant's Disease."

This disease results from the lack of planning — when an organization develops its programs depending on what grants it can get. The organization ends up going in so many directions that it loses its focus and purpose. Planning helps you place an isolated funding request in the context of the overall organizational growth. Remember that when you approach a donor, he will want to know the facts.

Planning will help you present the facts in a clear and concise manner, convincing donors that their gifts will be well-used.

YOUR ORGANIZATION'S credibility will be a key factor in your ability to raise funds. An important part of establishing that credibility is your ability to use funds effectively. The more earned income you are able to generate, the healthier your organization will be and the more favorably major contributors will view you. Earned income is an indication that you provide a service that people value. Businessmen relate well to that concept. When funding agencies and individuals look at your request for funds, they will scrutinize your track record to see whether you have used money well in the past.

In addition, your credibility will be judged by the past management of your programs, the strength of your organization's leadership, the performance of the staff and the quality of the planning. Modern fund-raising is 10 percent solicitation and 90 percent homework. It is hard, laborious work. You cannot simply take some time out to do a little fund-raising. You must build fund-raising into the fabric of your organization. You must budget for it and allocate time for it.

At a time when federal grants are shrinking, when the taxed dollar is under scrutiny, it is even more important that the art of fund-raising be as professional and business like as possible.

While the burden of fund-raising may be on the cultural organization, it is the responsibility of the local contributors to "fund" those activities which make a definite contribution to the community and to fill the gap made by dwindling corporate and federal revenue.

Islam, the gold rush and boat races are subjects of free films in Monterey

The Gold Rush, riverboat racing and the world of Islam are the subjects of three short films to be shown at the Monterey Public Library at 2 p.m. today, March 25.

Westward Movement V — The Gold Rush, explores how the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill changed the history of California and the U.S.

The second film, White Water Fury, is a documentary featuring the Great Canadian Marathon River Boat Race which involves jet boats propelled over boiling rapids. Slow-motion and aerial shots of the chilling sport heighten the tremendous excitement.

The world of Islam is explored in Islam and The Prophet and the People, a film which conveys the spiritual and practical force of Islam.

The films are free and the public is welcome. The library is located 625 Pacific, Monterey.

For more information, phone 646-3930.

Music Corner

Concerts offer varied fare

By LYN BRONSON

SOPRANO ELLY AMELING and pianist Dalton Baldwin were presented by the Carmel Music Society on Saturday evening at Sunset Theater in a song recital that was one of the most eagerly-awaited musical events of the season.

Miss Ameling obviously relishes singing what she sings best, and thus there were no surprises on the program. In fact, since almost everything heard has been recorded at least once previously by these artists, Miss Ameling's fans had an opportunity to hear many songs live which were already familiar from recordings.

We usually do a disservice to an artist by comparing recorded performances to live ones. First of all, the recorded performance is made under optimum studio conditions and each song, or portion thereof, can be done over and over until the best possible version is on tape.

And then come the recording studio editors — those magicians who can splice, erase, mix, filter unwanted noise, add reverb, boost dynamics or otherwise enhance a studio performance. Thus there is usually a larger-than-life impact of any recorded performance which is difficult for an artist to live up to in live concert.

But, there is another aspect, and that is the freezing of an interpretation on record which can become committed to memory on repeating hearing so that any departure from this in live performances becomes unsettling to the listener — to the point where we can lose our flexibility and receptiveness to an artist's changing conception of the music.

And change is the key element here. Artists are constantly maturing and developing. Whether for better or for worse, they are nonetheless changing.

Thus it was no surprise that Miss Ameling sounded quite different in live concert. Her voice has become much darker and heavier, and this quality was less pleasing in the Mozart, Weldon and Schubert songs than it was in the selections which followed.

And Miss Ameling also took a while to warm up to the audience. But, by the time she reached Schubert's Die junge Nonne she seemed firmly in control. In this song she created a lovely moment in the coda with a sweet, pure pianissimo as she sang Horch, friedlich ertönt das Glocklein vom Turm!

("Hark the little bell sings peacefully from the tower!"). It was pure magic and a beautiful contrast to the Sturm and Drang which preceded it.

The other German lieder were suavely presented, although always a little understated and cool. After intermission came a group of French songs (some by German and Austrian composers, we might add), and this was by far the most impressive part of the program.

The two Debussy songs, C'est l'extase langoureuse, and Mandolin, were smooth and effortless. Similarly, the Chausson and Duparc songs were tossed off with utter ease and naturalness. One of the most unexpected gems on the program was the delightful La Rosa y el Sauce by Carlos Guastavino which sounded like a cross between Rachmaninoff's Vocalise and Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasileiras No. 5.

Miss Ameling rewarded the appreciative audience with two encores — La Danza by Rossini and a cradle song by the Japanese composer Nakada.

And special mention must be made of the piano artistry of Dalton Baldwin. He truly loves the vocal literature and always managed to be an equal partner or a discreet accompanist, whichever was called for.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony's fifth concert of the season at King Hall in Monterey featured Polish violinist Wanda Wilkomirska. Miss Wilkomirska was in the news recently for having decided not to return to Poland because of the present political situation. However, she has chosen to remain a Polish citizen.

Contributing to the interest of the evening was a rare performance of the Karol Szymanowski Violin Concerto No. 1, which to my best knowledge, has never been recorded (except, perhaps in Poland) and is thus unknown to Western audiences.

The concerto is constructed in a continuous design with some obvious sectional changes, but without discernible contrasting movements. The title "Rhapsody for Violin and Orchestra" would have been a better title for the work than "concerto," which usually implies a multi-movement work.

The opening solo was a soliloquy for violin against a wash of orchestra sound. The violin part soared above the shimmering, kaleidoscopically shifting colors of the orchestral strings. It was very similar to what we might expect on the soundtrack of a film about the supernatural — a sort of precursor to the "Spellbound Concerto" of 1945, but remarkably prescient for a work written in 1916. Most of the violin writing, with the exception of the Kochanski cadenza, seems to sound somewhat awkwardly written for the instrument.

As to Miss Wilkomirska's playing, her performance in this concerto raises more questions than it answers. How should this concerto sound? We have no standard for comparison, but I would like to hear her play it again, and, most of all, I would like to hear her playing one of the more idiomatic concertos in the repertoire.

MR. TAEUBER opened the concert with the Roy Harris Symphony No. 3 in One Movement. This distinctly "American" work turned out to be well-written and effective for orchestra. It bristled with vitality and, in addition, avoided the hokiness of the "Americana" of Ferde Grofe and Aaron Copland.

The economy of means and subtlety of orchestration in the Harris symphony was fascinating and the Monterey County Symphony turned in their best performance of the evening in this piece, even though there were ensemble problems throughout the work, especially in the strings.

After intermission, Mr. Taeuber led the orchestra through Tchaikovsky's mighty Symphony No. 4 in F Minor, a tour de force by any standard. This performance was beset by many ensemble problems, suggesting that rehearsal time was inadequate for a work of this scope. The development section of the First Movement, with its treacherous syncopations, teetered on the edge of chaos.

The third movement, the famous Pizzicato Scherzo, was the high point of the Tchaikovsky. This movement never loses its magic. Otherwise, there was much coarse playing throughout. A good example was the lack of restraint of the cymbal player which would have been more appropriate in a marching band.

The Monterey County Symphony's concluding concert of the season will feature pianist Leonard Pennario as soloist in Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G Major on May 2 at King Hall. Also on the All-Beethoven program will be the Prometheus Overture and the Eroica Symphony.

MPC will present jazz combo concert

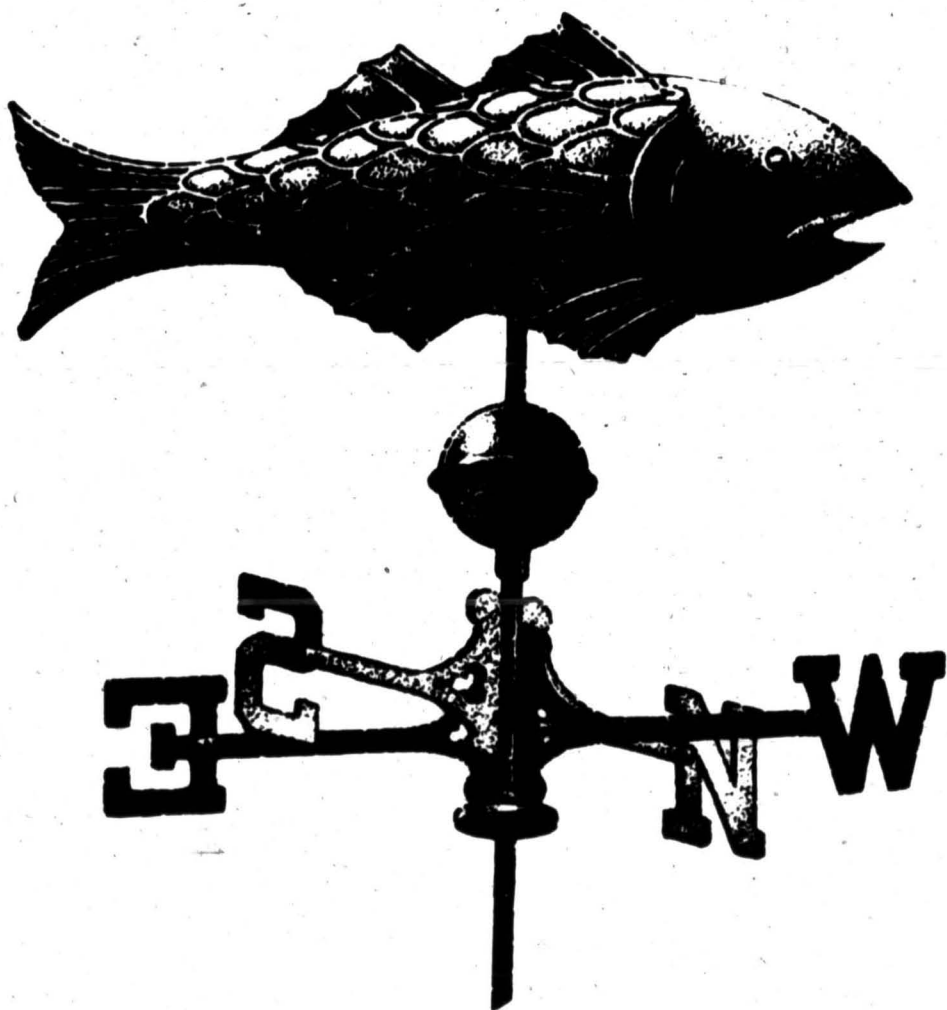

A Jazz Combo concert featuring Nils Ekeröth will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula College Music Department at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 25 in the Music Hall on campus, 980 Fremont, Monterey.

Ekeröth is a former MPC music student currently living and working in San Jose. He has been a featured soloist with the MPC Alumni Jazz Bands.

The concert will follow a new concept in jazz programming at the college, featuring several different student combos. Usually, small groups are scheduled between big band numbers. This concert will consist entirely of small groups, centering on the role of the small group in jazz as essential for the development of improvisational skills.

Admission is $2. For more information, phone 646-4207.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA ORDINANCE NO. 82-6

AN INTERIM ZONING ORDINANCE EXTENDING FOR ONE YEAR
ORDINANCE NO. 81-7 PROHIBITING ESTABLISHMENT OF SMALL SPACES FOR RETAIL SALE OF MERCHANDISE THROUGH SUBLETTING, LICENSING, GRANTING CONCESSIONS OR OTHERWISE PENDING A STUDY OF A PROPOSED ZONING OR-DINANCE.

WHEREAS, Interim Zoning Ordinance No. 81-7 was adopted by the City Council on April 6, 1981 and extended by Ordinance No. 81-22 adopted by the City Council on August 3, 1981; and

WHEREAS, Government Code Section 65858 authorizes extending Ordinance No. 81-7 for one year following the expiration of the eight month period provided for in Ordinance No. 81-22 and after public hearing; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for adopting Interim Zoning Ordinance No. 81-7 still exist and more time is needed to study the problems discussed therein and to adopt permanent regulations; and

WHEREAS, a duly noticed public hearing on the question of extending Interim Zoning Ordinance No. 81-7 for one year was held on March 16, 1982;

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Interim Zoning Ordinance No. 81-7 entitled "An Urgency Ordinance Prohibiting Establishment of Small Spaces for Retail Sale of Merchandise Through Subletting, Licensing, Granting Concessions or Otherwise Pending a Study of a Proposed Change in Zoning Ordinances" adopted April 6, 1981 and extended by Ordinance No. 81-22 is extended for one year until midnight April 5, 1983.

Section 2. The interim ordinance as extended prohibits the establishment of merchandise markets, the use of any space for retail purposes which space is smaller than 250 square feet, and the use of any space for retail purposes which space is unenclosed by walls, ceiling and doors which can be securely locked, which prohibitions are more extensively set out in Section One of Ordinance No. 81-7. Said prohibitions are subject to certain exemptions set forth in Section Three of Ordinance No. 81-7.

Section 3. The adoption of this Ordinance is required for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety in that the City proposes to consider enacting changes in the present retail zoning regulations as they relate to the size of space used for retail purposes. These changes, it is deemed, are needed urgently. City Council, therefore, adopts this Ordinance to avoid the frustration of the purpose of the proposed changes during the interim period of study, and to prevent unfair economic advantage to any persons able to make developments in these areas at this time.

Section 4. Effective Date. As an urgency ordinance, this ordinance shall become effective immediately and shall terminate on midnight on April 5, 1983.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA THIS 16th day of March, 1982, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCILMEMBERS: ARNOLD, BROWN, BRUNN, LLOYD, LAIOLO

If . . .

If you had a choice between a 2 carat diamond with a small flaw and a 1 carat stone that's perfect, which would you take? If your choice is perfection, then this house is for you: deliberately small, ingeniously perfect.

It's set back on a 40 x 100 lot at the south end of Carmel, a quiet wooded block not far from the sea. The exterior is redwood panels accented by battens. A broad redwood deck wraps around the front and north side, and graceful oaks provide shade.

The entrance is at the end of the deck, opening to a white, well lighted hall. The cheerful living room is down 3 steps to the right, with windows on 3 sides, white walls of planks, beamed cathedral ceiling, and a charming fireplace bordered in beautiful Italian tile. The floors here, and every place but the kitchen, are carpeted in soft beige.

The kitchen, at the rear, is a model of good taste and efficient planning. Walls are papered in sunny yellow, the floor is tan and white vinyl, cabinets are light-colored wood, and counters are white tile with high splash-backs. A skylight is just above the sink, and again there are windows on 3 sides. One is a Dutch door, opening out to a small brick patio.

There are 2 bedrooms and 2 full baths. The master suite at the front is an 18 x 13 chamber with steep cathedral ceiling, great French doors opening to the deck, and more windows on front and south side. Closets line the inner wall, and beyond them is the spacious master bath. Theatrical lighting tops the huge mirrors, counters are white tile, a tub and shower with window fill the south wall.

The second bedroom and bath lie between living room and kitchen. This, too, has a beamed ceiling, copious closets, and lots of light. The second bath has a large glassed-in shower and more theatrical lighting.

The present owners have called this "Escape III," an accurate description in two words. It's ideal as a weekend retreat, and just as suitable as a full time home. There's very little care, everything's in place, it's fresh as a new penny. If you're tired of maintaining a mansion but reluctant to give up the comforts, see "Escape III." It's $275,000.

SLEEPING ON NEW PARK BENCHES NOT TO BE OPPOSED BY MAYOR

Unemployed individuals who find no abode in the village, will not be prevented from resting their tired bones on the benches of the new city park.

At least such instructions will be given to the Carmel police department by Mayor Herbert Heron, following a conference with Mrs. James Hopper, who has been instrumental in promoting the park.

While the bedless ones will not be invited to come to the village, they will at least be given an opportunity to spend the night in the park benches without a policeman's club tapping their feet.

There is, however, one consideration which must be followed by park bench sleepers. That is, the benches must be cleared by seven o'clock in the morning. There will be no morning naps allowed.

"In these days of financial disturbances and unemployment, the village should meet the situation squarely in the face," Mayor Herbert Heron says, "Consequently, I for one, am not opposed to anyone using the park benches for beds. After all, why protest, when many of us might have to sleep in the park anyway."

THE VIEW FROM COOKE'S COVE

On Sunday of the over-crowded Washington's birthday weekend, the Pt. Lobos people turned away 400 cars. Four hundred cars is a lot of cars — and that's not counting the ones that got in and the number that came and went. Automobile visitors at the park have risen 120 percent in numbers in the past ten years. During 1971, there were only 90 days when under 100 cars sought admission.

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

Do you remember the good old days when . . . The Carmel Valley Volunteer Firemen had a baseball team featuring such baseball "Greats" as Pete Danielson, Boyd Danielson, Ray Danielson, Walt Mauzey, Ed Mayfield, Jess Vinson, Hugh Erwin, Richard Jennings, Clyde Jennings, Ed Riddle, Ed Capon, Jim Muscutt, Don Weber, Dick McKenzie, Kenneth Zug and Bob Mottern . . . Vic Silva — then as now, one of Carmel Valley's best appearing cowboys — won a rope donated by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department . . . Hazel Indart won the "best appearing cowgirl award" at that roundup . . . Carmel Valley's first costume ball was the "Aqua-Bal" with "Flotsam and Jetsam" (Pil and Tommy Cordrey) taking the prize for the most unique costumes wearing yards of fishnet adorned with cork floats, shells, fish skeletons, and arms, legs, and faces painted green . . . when K.D. Mathiot ran a flock of 3,000 chickens on his Rancho Carmelo land along with his famous Arabian horses . . . the late Joe Hitchcock discovered a sure way to predict the weather by charting the course of a Valley tarantula . . . those were the good old days!

CHAMBER AUCTION RATED SUCCESS

Carmel Valley's "Auction d'Elegance," a silent auction on Saturday night, March 19, was termed an outstanding success by Chairman John Von Berg with over $6,000 grossed for the benefit of several Valley organizations: The Carmel Valley Community Center, Hidden Valley Seminars and the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Over 300 attended the event in Hidden Valley's rustic theatre, sipped champagne, dined on an elaborate buffet and bid on the 140 items all donated by local businesses and individuals. Hidden Valley musicians provided continuous music in a unique stage high above the crowd.

Don Canham was the lucky bidder for "Honey Bee," the registered quarter horse donated by Lyn Eldridge.

The silent auction is an annual affair and is sponsored by the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Tourmaline is the look at La Porte's

STRONG, GEOMETRIC SHAPES and bigger, more important pieces describe the spring trend in fine jewelry, according to knowledgeable Bill Turrentine of La Porte's, 165 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove.

Fashion dictates the shape of quality jewelry to some extent, Bill says, and the movement to more formal, tailored clothing calls for the accent of heavy gold bracelets and large, emerald-cut gemstones in rings.

If there is "fashion" in gemstones, then the tourmaline is where the action is. Especially in deep blue-green or pink-red tones, surrounded by diamonds in impressive rings, the tourmaline is magnificent.

For spring accents, coral and turquoise provide good color, while the freshwater pearl, worn in many lengths and colors, continues a strong favorite.

Jade, too, is ubiquitously popular, with green and lavender the most sought-after shades. Bill confides that fine-quality green jade is always a sound investment and La Porte's has several exceptional pieces available.

Jewelry for men is gaining in popularity and the return of the French cuff on dress shirts is leading to a demand for fine gold cufflinks, frequently accented with onyx, jade or diamonds.

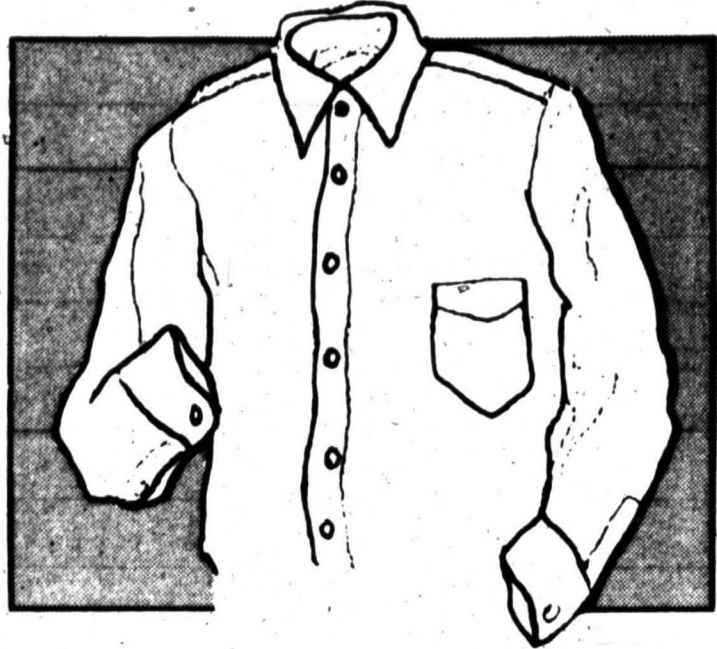

Family owned and operated for many years, La Porte's can be depended upon to advise you well and offer the finest selection in fine jewelry.

Treat yourself to a beautiful figure to match your clothes

FIGURE CONTOUR BY CAROLE specializes in cellulite therapy through connective tissue massage. Connective Tissue Massage is a highly specialized massage technique which involves kneading the flesh separating the fatty cells. It will loosen tension knots, reactivate sluggish circulation and mobilize fatty deposits. The entire body improves its tone, is firmed and reshaped. Connective Tissue Massage is actually body sculpturing.

A special diet may not be necessary, but to benefit from the program you must eat well-balanced sensible meals. By recording your daily intake of food and drink, you will become aware of what you consume, and you will reeducate your eating habits.

The standard contour program consists of a series of 10 treatments over a period of three to five weeks. After only five visits, you will see an inch reduction — confirmed by the measurements recorded at the beginning, halfway and final points of the treatment.

The contour program is highly personalized. Some clients continue treatment on an individually designed maintenance contour program; others return periodically or not at all.

Quality gems at Henri Corbat

THE FASCINATION with colored stones, especially rubies, continues this spring, according to Henri Corbat Swiss Jewelers at the corner of San Carlos and Fifth, Carmel. But, cautions their gemologist, diamonds continue to be the stone of choice!

Diamonds are popular set in rings with one larger central stone surrounded by side stones. Styles include princess, ballerina and eternity rings. Diamonds are also increasingly popular when set into gold chains with bezel settings; these stones are frequently from estate pieces and have an heirloom value all their own.

Fashion news in fine men's jewelry is the crest ring. Henri Corbat employs the only German-trained stone engraver in the area. This talented artisan carves crests — family shields — onto a variety of stones including onyx, carnelian, lapis lazuli and garnet, to be set in impressive gold settings. The art of engraving into stone, by the way, is called glyptic.

If you aren't sure of your family crest, Henri Corbat has resources to help research it.

For fine gemstones, gleaming pearls, custom-designs, estate jewelry — in short, for all your heart might desire, Henri Corbat Swiss Jeweler can supply the answer.
